There is no evidence of any infantry force having been with him.

TELEGRAMS FROM PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 18.

The Inquirer, of this morning, has the following extracts taken from the Baltimore Clipper, of last evening:

"We learn from the headquarters of Gen. SCHENCK that information has been received from Gen. TYLER that the rebel forces invested Harper's Ferry on the 16th inst., and made an attack, attempting to surprise Gen. TYLER's forces.

The latter, after resisting, retired to the Maryland Heights and shelled the rebels, compelling them to evacuate the Ferry.

The rebels then retreated to Williamsport, when Gen. TYLER recrossed and occupied his former position.

Travel between Harper's Ferry and Baltimore is resumed.

All accounts agree that the rebels have left Chambersburgh, that there are none at Westminster, and that they are in but small force at Hagerstown."

The Inquirer has the following special dispatch from Washington:

"A letter from one of Gen. EWELL's Aids, found in the captured rebel mail, says that rebel cavalry are en route to Pittsburgh from Suffolk.

The letter also says that there were only three rebel regiments in the vicinity of the Blackwater on Saturday, and that two of them would leave the same day to join LEE's forces.

There were no rumors of any fighting by Gen. HOOKER yesterday."

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 18—6 P. M.

A dispatch to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company from Harrisburgh, 5 o'clock P. M., says:

"The rebels are reported to be returning to Chambersburgh from Hagerstown."

HARRISBURGH, Thursday, June 18—4 P. M.

A dispatch from Chambersburgh reports the enemy returning in force. The operator was preparing to leave.

Three New-York regiments have reported at Reading. Preparations are made to receive them here to-night.

The drafted men and nine-months' volunteers of this State are volunteering for six months.

There is no trustworthy news regarding the movements of the enemy. No large force has yet approached the Cumberland Valley.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 18—8:30 P. M.

The following dispatch was sent to Gen. CAMERON by a gentleman of this city, yesterday:

"It is reported that you advised taking the command of the State troops from Gen. COUCH, and giving it either to Gen. FRANKLIN or Gen. MCCLELLAN. Is this true? If not, will you authorize me to contradict it?"

The following reply was received:

"Your telegram of yesterday was handed to me late last night. I authorize you to say that I made no such proposition. SIMON CAMERON.

TELEGRAMS FROM MCCONNELLSBURGH.

MCCONNELLSBURGH, Penn., Wednesday, June 17.

Stragglers from the late flight bring information up to 5 o'clock yesterday evening from below.

They report that eight thousand rebels have crossed the river at Williamsport, and are marching on Hancock, at which point sixteen hundred of MILROY's routed forces had been collected. These men, being in a state of utter demoralization, without officers or organization, fled at the reported advance of the rebels, and they are now scattered through all parts of the country.

TELEGRAMS FROM SHIPPENSBURGH.

SHIPPENSBURGH, Penn., Wednesday, June 17.

A gentleman direct from Chambersburgh reports that the rebels left that place this afternoon, having first set fire to the warehouse of OAKS & LINN.

The fire was afterwards subdued by the citizens.

It is supposed the rebels retreated toward Hagerstown.

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT AT BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, June 18—2 P. M.

The Seventh Regiment arrived at 1 o'clock, and have just reported at Gen. SCHENCK's headquarters, in Monument-square.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, June 18.

By the order from Gov. SEYMOUR, Col. LEFFERTS, with the Seventh Regiment, was directed to report to Gen. COUCH, at Harrisburgh. Before he arrived at Philadelphia he received the following order from Maj.-Gen. HALLECK, which changed the programme:

HEADQUARTERS PHILADELPHIA, June 17, 1863.

To the Commanding Officer of the Seventh Regiment, New-York State Militia:

SIR: You will proceed without delay to Baltimore, Md. Report, on the arrival of your regiment, to Maj.-Gen. ROBERT E. SCHENCK, U. S. V., Commanding that Military Department. Transportation is provided for your regiment on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad.

By command of Maj.-Gen. HALLECK,
General-in-Chief.

S. R. RUFF, Lieut.-Col. Third Cavalry U. S. A., commanding Philadelphia, &c.

This order was promptly met, and after partaking of the hospitality of the Union Refreshment Saloon, the regiment embarked for Baltimore. They arrived in this city about 12:30, and for the night are quartered in the Government barracks in Holiday-street. Col. LEFFERTS reported to Gov. SEYMOUR his action as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, Midnight, June 18, 1863.

To Gen. John S. Sprague, Adjutant-General, Albany:

I have received orders from Maj.-Gen. HALLECK to proceed to Baltimore, and am now in the cars ready to leave for that city. I presume this will receive the sanction of the Governor.

(Signed,) MARSHALL LEFFERTS,
Colonel Commanding Seventh Reg't.

The Colonel received the Governor's sanction by telegraph, with his thanks for the promptness with which the regiment has moved.

The Twenty-seventh regiment, nine months' men, on their way home from Cincinnati, have volunteered to proceed to Harrisburgh to meet the rebels.

NEWSPAPER REPORTS.

WINCHESTER AND HARPER'S FERRY.

From the Baltimore American, June 8.

GEN. MILROY'S TRAINS.

HARRISBURGH, June 17.—After a terrible march from Berryville via Bunker Hill, Martinsburgh and Williamsport, we arrived here yesterday morning with all our trains safely. JAS. TOUCKSTONE,
Quartermaster Sixth Maryland Volunteers.

We learn from a gentleman from Harrisburgh, this morning, that this train was an immense affair, bringing also a large number of wounded, including WM. P. MAULSBY, whom they left in good quarters at Carlisle.

Nearly all the public property and stores were safely gotten away from Winchester, MILROY's train of about two hundred wagons, with horses and some cavalry and infantry, and a considerable number of the Fifth Maryland regiment, all of which crossed the Potomac and came through Hagerstown, Chambersburgh, Carlisle, and other towns, have reached Harrisburgh.

It is supposed by many persons that this train was taken by affrighted persons as being a large rebel force. It said that the rebel cavalry was close in the rear of it until they reached near Newville, and there stopped, which is their nearest approach to Harrisburgh.

The regiments engaged at Martinsburgh were the One hundred and fifty-first New-York, Second Maryland, and the Thirteenth Pennsylvania, which ran at the first fire.

ARRIVAL OF GEN. MILROY.

Maj.-Gen. MILROY reached Baltimore at 1 o'clock this morning, from Harper's Ferry, and returned again at 11 o'clock on a special train, with his Staff. He came down to have a personal interview with Maj.-Gen. SCHENCK, and to waive all claims of rank in interfering with the command at that point. He, however, desired to return to his men, and volunteered to act in any position that he might be deemed most serviceable.

THE EVACUATION OF WINCHESTER.

We had the pleasure of a brief conversation with him, and were pleased to learn that his forces have not suffered to so great an extent as was supposed. At the time he left the Ferry, forty-two members of ALEXANDER's Maryland battery had arrived, and it was believed a considerable number had made their escape in the direction of Romney and Cumberland. They mostly secured their horses, and have probably accompanied the cavalry.

THE FIFTH MARYLAND.

The only Maryland regiment that suffered severely was the Fifth regiment, known as Col. SCHLEY's, who was absent in Baltimore. The enemy turned the guns of the Maryland battery on this regiment, and for a time they were in a very hot position. The number killed and wounded is not known, though but few of them escaped either casualties or capture. They fought bravely, and it is hoped that a good number of them are prisoners of war.

THE ESCAPE OF THE SIXTH MARYLAND.

The Sixth Maryland regiment, which was reported to have been cut up and almost destroyed, to the astonishment of every one, came marching into Harper's Ferry yesterday afternoon, with their flags flying, arms at rest, and singing "Hail Columbia," with the gallant Col. HOWE at their head. It seemed like as if they had risen from the dead, and their return caused great astonishment.

It appears that at the commencement of the assault on Winchester they were entirely cut off, and being surrounded by an immense force surrendered, and were taken back of the works. In the confusion of the assault being made by the rebels, they were neither disarmed or placed under guard, and Col. HOWE knowing the country well, and seeing an opportunity to escape by a side road, formed his men in line, and in the darkness of the evening moved quietly off. They were compelled to take a circuitous road to reach the ferry, but went on their way rejoicing, with neither an enemy in front nor pursuers in the rear.

ESCAPE OF THE CAVALRY.

The cavalry force of Gen. MILROY consisted of the First New-York, Thirtieth Pennsylvania and two companies of the Third Virginia. Gen. MILROY ordered them to retreat to Romney and Cumberland, and he, yesterday, received a dispatch announcing their safe arrival at that place.

THE EVACUATION OF WINCHESTER

The outer works at Winchester were carried by the rebels by storm at 6 o'clock on Sunday evening, and the whole fortifications strongly invested by a force of not less than fifteen thousand men under Gen. EWELL. It became at once a question of ultimate surrender, or to make a bold dash to force their way through the enemy's lines, and a counsel of war held on Sunday night, unanimously advised an evacuation. The large guns and his artillery were all spiked at once, and at 1 o'clock on Monday morning he abandoned everything except his horses, and struck boldly through the enemy's lines. The movement was so rapid that the enemy was taken by surprise, and the night being quite dark, the movement so far as the troops immediately investing the works were concerned, was accomplished with but little loss.

They were followed by cavalry, and a great many stragglers taken prisoners, but when four miles this side of Winchester, at the junction of the road leading from Berryville to Bunker Hill and Martinsburgh, they were intercepted by a strong rebel force with artillery, and strongly posted in the woods on the roadside. Gen. MILROY rallied his men, and made several attempts to storm and capture their batteries, but was driven back.

Daylight was now rapidly approaching, and it was deemed prudent to endeavor again to cut their way through the enemy's lines, which was successfully accomplished, and being without artillery they suffered considerably, especially in prisoners captured, before the enemy gave up the pursuit.

About 12 o'clock on Monday they reached Halltown, and the enemy having abandoned the pursuit, they, after a short rest, marched into Harper's Ferry during the afternoon. The gallant fellows were in a sad condition after so severe a march and fight, but were full of spirit and gratification that they had escaped the clutches of the enemy.

All the stores, ammunition and wagons at Winchester fell into the hands of the enemy, together with all the artillery, not a gun having been saved.

AFFAIRS AT HARPER'S FERRY.

The telegraph is again working to Harper's Ferry this morning, and, as far as can be ascertained, there has been no rebel movements on the Maryland side of the river. The telegraph office has been moved on to the Maryland Heights, and there is every reason to believe that if the enemy approach in force the town will be abandoned and the whole force retire across the river to the extensive works erected on that strong position.

The folly of attempting to stand a siege in Harper's Ferry was demonstrated last year, and there is no doubt it will be soon if it has not already been evacuated. Every preparation has been made for such an emergency, and the enemy will obtain but little plunder. The town is thoroughly commanded from the Heights, and it can be made of but little or no value to the enemy.

HARRISBURGH.

A WAR MEETING.

From the Harrisburgh Union, June 17.

A meeting of our citizens assembled at the Court-house, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, to take action in reference to the defence of the city against the invaders coming up the valley. The meeting was a large and earnest one, the capacious room being filled in a very short time after the ringing of the bell.

Gen. CAMERON was called to the chair, assisted by Vice-Presidents and other officers.

In a few minutes Gov. CURTIN entered, looking somewhat fatigued and careworn. He was welcomed with loud applause. The Governor said substantially that he was gratified to say that men were arising all over the State, and would soon be here. The New-York Seventh were on the way to our assistance; men were coming from Philadelphia, and one thousand men from Berks would arrive in the next train. We will not surrender the town without a struggle. The rebels had probably destroyed the beautiful valley on our west; but, thank God, we were separated from them by a natural barrier, the passage of which would be disputed. Although it was dry here, the river had, through the providence of God, raised during the night; and should we mortals stand inactive while the Almighty was working for us? He had no property here, but the honor of the State was dear to him, and should be to every Pennsylvanian. He thanked the brave militia for the support they were ready to give, but he was sorry for the lateness of this call; he desired to make it last week, but the President refused it. But let us forget that we have been treated wrongly. The General Government must be sustained, as well as the State. He had been willing to concede everything to the Administration, and to carry out their plans to the best of his ability. He called upon all Pennsylvanians to rush to arms for the defence of their native State, that her capital might not be defiled with the tread of the invader. There would be plenty of guns and ammunition on hand before the day closed.

Gen. CAMERON followed in a short speech, in which he said that, by virtue of his office, Gov. CURTIN was Commander-in-Chief of the Pennsylvania Militia, and that he was willing to take him as his leader, and follow him in defence of our homes. He moved that he be requested to take command of the force now called out, subject to the orders of Gen. COUCH. When we see our brave Governor mounting his steed and calling upon the people to follow, we will at once rally to the call. The highest officer and the humblest individual were on a level now, and every person should do his duty. He thought we should be led by our constitutional commander.

To this Mr. KUNKEL strongly objected, saying that it would be an abandonment of his office.

Mr. CAMERON—It is not an abandonment of his office; it is but a part of his legitimate duty.

Mr. KUNKEL—I can't understand this. I don't see why our Governor, who is worn out by the duties of his office, should lead the van of the militia, when Gen. COUCH, a United States officer, is with us. There is a disposition on the part of Mr. CAMERON to drag the Governor from his legitimate duties. I would as soon the President of this meeting should be our leader, and he is as much fitted and called upon to perform that duty as the Governor.

Mr. CAMERON—I am ready to shoulder a musket and go as a private under the Governor.

Gov. CURTIN then said he could do no more than this; he would go as he did last Fall, when he went with the militia to Hagerstown, but got from the United States the coöperation of a military mind to direct immediate operations.

Mr. CAMERON—That is what we want. [To which the crowd responded with ringing cheers.]

The meeting then adjourned by order of the President, to meet at their respective Wards to organize military companies.

THE EXCITEMENT UNABATED.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

HARRISBURGH, Tuesday, June 16—Midnight.

It is difficult to convey an exact idea of the state of affairs here to-night, not only on account of the confusion existing, but in consequence of the danger of trenching on what may be contraband ground. During the morning a perfect panic prevailed, extending to all classes of people, and resulting in the greatest demand for railroad tickets ever witnessed in this city. The enemy were supposed to be just over the river, or, at any rate, at Carlisle, and every woman in the place seemed anxious to leave for safer regions. Trunks were piled up at the depots six feet in height, for nearly a square, and hundreds if not thousands of people eagerly awaited the hour of the departure of the various trains.

In the meanwhile, the State Capitol had been completely denuded of everything of value, from the portraits of the Governors to the books in the library. The books, papers, paintings and other valuables were packed in freight cars and made ready for instant departure in case of decided signs of danger to the city.

Measures were taken yesterday to rouse the people to the danger at hand, and during to-day about one thousand persons were earnestly at work on the other side of the Susquehanna, throwing up a bastioned redout, for the protection of Harrisburgh. The work was kept up all day, and far into the evening, and late to-night we saw files of laborers returning from their unwonted toil.

There were but few regular soldiers in town to-to-day, the principal display being made by three companies of invalids from the military hospitals at York. They arrived during the afternoon, and when drawn up on Third-street, they looked as if there was considerable fight in them yet.

During the entire afternoon Market-street was occupied with army wagons from MILROY's division, which rumbled across the old bridge, and from thence past the railroad depot and out to a camp ground on the other side of the canal. These wagons were mostly drawn by four horses, though there were some mule teams among them. Dust was the prevailing feature of the vehicles, from the ears of the horses to the hat rims of the teamsters. Some of the wagons were filled with hay and some with tents, while from many peeped the black faces, grinning mouths and white teeth of contrabands, large and small, of both sexes. For several hours this wagon train completely filled Market-street, giving the spectators a far better idea of the dust, turmoil and fatigue of war than they could get in any other way.

At this hour Harrisburgh is considered "safe," though telegraphic advices may tell you that the delusive tale is untrue ere this is in print. Trains are running as usual on the railroads; Democratic politicians are drinking at the hotel bars, and the regular routine of night life at the Capital is in full progress as I sign myself, E. C. W.

AN OFFICIAL ORDER.

Col. EMLEN FRANKLIN, commanding the defences of Lancaster County, has issued an order directing the citizens to report at various localities. It concludes thus:

"Citizens equipped and ordered as above are designed for the defence of the county, and may arrive at the place of rendezvous singly, in squads or companies, and report to the commanding officer of the line, who will report the same direct to the officer commanding defences.

As the honor and safety of Lancaster County depends upon a prompt obedience to this order, the commanding officer earnestly trusts that it may be forthwith respected."

THE PITTSBURGH FORTIFICATIONS.

From the Pittsburgh Evening Chronicle, 17th.

Work on the city fortifications was vigorously prosecuted yesterday, and by Saturday, at the furthest, the more important works will be ready to receive their guns. There are two forts being erected on Herron's Hill, and both are rapidly approaching completion. This hill is the highest point of ground, we believe, west of Greensburgh, and the works being erected upon it will command all the other forts within range. The larger work will be named "Fort Herron," out of respect to the late Col. HERRON, from whom the hill takes its name, and the smaller "Fort Anderson," in memory of the late Col. ANDERSON, of Manchester. The works beyond the cemetery are also progressing finely. These works are located on Negley's Hill, and not on Davis' Hill, as stated yesterday. The property belongs to Mrs. B. A. NEGLEY, grandmother of Gen. JAMES NEGLEY, and on the occasion of a celebration there some forty years since, received the name of Mount Independence, by which it has since been known. The celebration alluded to was gotten up under the auspices of Maj. WOOLEY, Commander of the Arsenal at the time. The hill was vocal with the booming of artillery during the day, and at night there was a grand display of fireworks, to witness which the entire population of the adjacent country turned out. The expenses of the celebration were defrayed by private subscription, and the affair was altogether one of the finest demonstrations of the kind which was ever seen in the neighborhood. Previous to this the ground was known as Negley's Hill, having been for many years in possession of the NEGLEY family. The works on Coal Hill are also well advanced toward completion. The different working parties were visited by thousands yesterday, but owing to the excellence of the arrangements there was no interference with the men allowed, and the best of order prevailed. Several new works were laid out yesterday, and as soon as those now in hand are completed, others will be commenced. It is the intention, we believe, to cover the approaches to the city in such a way that it will be almost impossible to take it unless by regular siege.

NEW-YORK STATE REGIMENTS.

By order of Gov. SEYMOUR, the Sixty-fifth, Seventy-fourth, Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth regiments of the Eighth division are to go to Harrisburgh, and also four companies of the Sixteenth regiment New-York State Volunteers, Sprague Light Cavalry.

SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18.

The following dispatch to this Bureau will be read with eager interest:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC, Thursday, June 18.

We can follow the course of the enemy through the last two weeks, as we think, pretty accurately. More than thirty days ago two brigades of what is now EWELL's corps, left Fredericksburgh by railroad. We could not learn where they went. TRIMBLE's brigade was one. This brigade, composed largely of Maryland rebels, now turns up in the advance in the Shenandoah Valley. We can now easily conceive how a force of one division was thrown around by rail into the valley by way of Staunton. The residue of EWELL's corps moved for the valley by way of Culpepper and Front Royal about two weeks ago.

When TRIMBLE got into the valley he found our forces too strong for him. He sent for help. EWELL supported him, and in the meantime STUART was getting his cavalry ready to dash through the valley as soon as the valley was cleared.

Vide the letter of an officer of CHEW's battery, which I picked up on the battle field of the great cavalry fight, and printed with my report as follows:

CAMP NEAR BRANDETH STATION,
CULPEPPER COURT-HOUSE, June 8, 1863.

DEAR BROTHER: We have made another change of base. We left Dayton one week ago to-day, and, after five days of marching, we encamped at this place. We have had two grand reviews of five brigades of cavalry, about 12,000 in number, under Gen. STUART. The first took place on Saturday, when we were inspected by STUART, and I have just now returned from the second, when we were inspected by Lieut.-Gen. ROBERT E. LEE in person. He was a fine-looking man, but very gray-haired. We are now in a battery numbering about sixteen pieces, under the command of Maj. BECKHAM. Longstreet's division passed us on Saturday. The Wise artillery was along. You can look out for some small fighting before a week. We are now about two miles from the Rappahannock, at Beverley's Ford. I expect, from the preparations that is being made, that we are going to make a grand raid toward the Potomac, as soon as the valley is cleared. * *

You must excuse the shortness of this letter, as I have just returned from the review, and I feel tired from riding so much. Direct your letter to CHEW's battery, JONES' cavalry brigade.

Please write immediately, as we may leave in a couple of days.

Your affectionate brother, J. M. D.

EWELL was then strong enough to attack MILROY, and endeavor to capture his whole command.

A week ago last Saturday, June 6, LONGSTREET's corps passed through Culpepper—vide letter above—and moved in the direction of Thornton's and Chester Gaps. A portion of it is possibly up to Front Royal and Ashby's Gap, but a small portion only. This corps pushed up to the support of EWELL, and is now undoubtedly in the valley. HILL's corps was left at Fredericksburgh. It seems to have been Gen. LEE's hope that the retention of one corps there would result in keeping even Gen. HOOKER's army in statu quo, for HILL never moved a foot till HOOKER did.

On Saturday last, the 13th, HILL's corps began marching out, and on Monday, the last of his column, a battery of artillery, left the city.

Whatever may have been the plans and designs of LEE, there is not the least doubt but that they have been materially interfered with, if not partially foiled, by two or three energetic movements on Gen. HOOKER's part—to wit: PLEASANTON's sudden attack on STUART damaged him badly, exposed his designs, and completely discomfited him. His proposed raid did not take place, and it is supposed that all the cavalry that has entered Pennsylvania is under command of JENKINS or IMBODEN, or some other Guerrilla of that stamp. STUART's heavy force of cavalry is certainly not there. In a day or two we may know just where it is.

Another thing that deranged LEE's plans was MILROY's energetic defence of Winchester, which would naturally render LEE's approach to the Potomac very cautious in the face of unexpectedly serious resistance. As to the reported forces on the line of the Potomac, and just north of it, they are probably the advance guard of EWELL's corps, and after the occupation of Winchester, there was nothing more natural than that they should seize the line of the Potomac, in the vicinity of Williamsport, and nothing more unnatural than that they should cross it in force until the whole of their army was within supporting distance—which it is not to-day.

The present position of the enemy, comparing all my information, I believe to be this: LONGSTREET and EWELL, in the valley, near Winchester; HILL on the march between Culpepper and Chester Gap, (but he has hardly had time to get on the other side of the Blue Ridge. LEE may make, it is thought, one of these two movements—across the Potomac up toward Hagerstown, defending the passes of South Mountain on his right flank, or a sudden concentration in the Loudon Valley and the passage of the Potomac at Nolan's Ford, just where he crossed it last year. L. L. CROUNSE.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 17.

The positions of the several corps of the Army of the Potomac are known in this City to-night, information from the southern side of the Potomac having been received up to half-past twelve o'clock to-day.

The whereabouts of Gen. LEE himself is not known, at least not publicly.

DEFEAT OF STUART'S CAVALRY.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18.

Our cavalry yesterday encountered a portion of STUART's cavalry, whipped them, and captured two squadrons, including eight officers.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18.

Information has officially reached here of a small skirmish yesterday at or near Aldie, between some of our cavalry forces and those of the enemy. The latter were forced to retire. Eight officers and between 60 and 70 men were, it is reported, captured by our forces.

Aldie is in Loudon County, ten miles southwest of Leesburgh, and in the gap between the Bull Run and Kittockton Mountains.

AFFAIRS IN HARRISBURGH.

The Panic—Preparations for the Rebels—A Paper Suppressed by Gen. Lee—Milroy's Wagon Train—The Democratic Convention.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

HARRISBURGH, Tuesday, June 16, 1863.

The telegraph having been arbitrarily arrested by the Government I am obliged to rely on the mail and send you what notes I can by the afternoon mail. Harrisburgh has had a grand scare. Most of the people have sold or carried away their effects. Household furniture and all kinds of merchandise have been carried away by the wholesale, and it is almost impossible to buy the simplest thing. I could find but one shoe-store in the whole town that had not been stripped, and that was kept by a Philadelphia man who has to come and attend shop himself—all his clerks having gone off—some to the wars, and some to the seclusion of private life. The State Library has been removed, and all the records. Everybody is frightened, but no one is hurt. The Daily Telegraph, the Republican newspaper, did not come out, as usual, this morning. The Patriot and Union did, and announced that its cotemporary had been suppressed by Gen. LEE. A very good joke, but like many another word spoken in jest, it contains a good deal of truth. All the compositors in the Telegraph office are returned nine months' men. When they went out the proprietor promised to retain their situations. They had returned and got fairly at work when the present raid was commenced, and with one accord they rushed to the field, and are to-day across the river on duty. As there were ten in all, the unfortunate Telegraph was left utterly helpless, and it is not further from the truth than Democratic newspapers generally get, to say that Gen. LEE has suppressed the Harrisburgh Telegraph. It is supposed that an edition will come out this afternoon, as some of the men have been allowed to return to their cases; but they are genuine minute-men, and must leave at a moment's warning.

I can learn nothing new up to the present time (noon) about the position of the rebels. It is generally conceded that they are intrenching at Chambersburgh, but no one can make out that there are more than two thousand of them in all. Three prisoners have been brought in—two yesterday and one to-day. The two were taken about Marysville and Chambersburgh. The one was taken just this side of Greencastle, and says he was in company with one of his Generals on a reconnoitring expedition. The place selected for fortifying at Chambersburgh is McClure's Farm, which the rebels say is Government property. Whether they intend this as a joke or not I do not know, but they act very freely on the supposition, and have confiscated all his horses and such other property as they choose to use. The prisoners taken are not at all communicative, and will say nothing in regard to the force.

MILROY's whole wagon train arrived here in safety last evening. He lost only two wagons, one of which broke down and had to be left. There seems to be no doubt that the force he met was greatly superior to his own. He had three hundred wagons, which is equivalent to ten thousand men—allowing ten wagons to a regiment. Where are the rest of the 18,000 rebels that are said to have fought him? Are they scattered along the way from Chambersburgh back to where they crossed the Potomac, or have they withdrawn and joined LEE's army to fight HOOKER? A reconnoissance only can tell, and from what I can see I would think that a reconnoissance would be made very soon, perhaps to-day.

Everything is on the qui vive. Citizens in straw hats and linen coats are parading the streets with muskets, and learning the manual of arms, hundreds of officers are rushing to and fro, and, to my great grief, occupying all the rooms at the hotels. The railroad trains, both arriving and departing, are loaded down, and the whole town is in such a state of excitement that even Pennsylvania Dutch phlegm cannot resist the contagion. What will become of Harrisburgh when it relapses into its usual stupor the oldest inhabitant cannot imagine.

I cannot with propriety say anything about our forces, their number or position. I have, however, no fears. The emergency is provided for. Perhaps, by to-night there may be something reliable that will not be contraband. The New-York Seventh has not arrived, though several very enthusiastic individuals sat up all night to welcome it.

The Democratic Convention met in the Capitol at 11 o'clock. The members are very nervous. They are much disposed to hurry things, not liking much the probable proximity of the rebels. Nothing has been yet done that can indicate the character of the Convention. It was organized by the selection of GEORGE NEBINGER as Chairman, and WILLIAM H. BUTLER as Secretary. A Committee on Permanent Organization was appointed, and then a lively debate sprang up as to whether the Committee on Resolutions should be appointed, and report after the Committee on Organization, which is the usual course, or before. In the latter case, everybody would have something to say, and I think the object of the motion is to give sundry and divers ambitious politicians an opportunity of defining themselves, and splitting hairs. Every member wants to show how easy and simple a thing it is to love your country and the Democratic party equally well. A verbatim report of the speeches would probably be very amusing in a comic almanac, but hardly worthy a place in the records of the State. The Committee on Organization was appointed and the meeting adjourned over until 2 o'clock without fixing any time for them to report. The debate will therefore continue on the opening, and the question is not settled. The nominees for President of the Convention are: NEBINGER, the temporary Chairman, WM. KITTLE and R. BRUCE PETTINGER.

No passengers have yet arrived by the Cumberland Valley Railroad, though the train is due at 11 o'clock. When it does arrive we may get some information as to the condition of things in the vanquished territory.

THE SIEGE OF VICKSBURG.

A Speedy Surrender of the City Considered Probable.

No Enemy in the Rear Within Thirty Miles.

HEADQUARTERS, WALNUT HILLS,
VICKSBURGH, June 13, via CAIRO, June 18.

A ride along the lines developed a change in the position of the enemy. Their batteries are silent on all sides, and there are only a few of their riflemen firing.

Our bombardment is kept up with continuous vigor. We have more guns in position.

Deserters coming into our lines to-day, report that the men and line officers are discontented, and are only prevented from deserting by the hope that they may be honorably surrendered in a few days.

Gen. BLAIR's reconnoissance between the Yazoo and Big Black revealed no signs of the enemy within thirty miles. Every useful thing has been destroyed for fifty miles around.

BRECKINRIDGE is said to be at Jackson.

Our position is equal to 100,000 men.

HEADQUARTERS, WALNUT HILLS,
Sunday, June 14.

Nothing of importance has transpired for the last twenty-four hours. Friday our batteries slackened, and the enemy rarely replies. The rebels are believed to be erecting an interior line of works, and falling back. About 100 of the enemy are reported to be killed and wounded daily by our sharpshooters. Our wounded are well cared for in field-hospitals. The health and moral of the army are good.

Chaplain EATON, Superintendent of contrabands, is here, making arrangements to withdraw to a safe place a large number of negroes who have collected here.

Gen. OSTERHAUS holds the Black River Bridge without interruption.

Paymasters will commence paying the troops immediately. The prospects of the siege look brighter and brighter, and no fears are entertained for the result.

A Bold Performance.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, June 16.

Last night, at 11 o'clock, ten rebel soldiers in citizens' dress, led by a rebel officer, came down the York and up the Pacossin River to WM. BARTLETT's store, paroled the guard and took away all the goods contained in the store. The neighbors acted as a guard for the rebels while they committed their depredations. Mr. BARTLETT is an old resident of Virginia and a well-known Union man, formerly connected with the Quartermaster's Office in this Department.

THE WAR IN KENTUCKY.

An Attack Feared at Columbus and Hickman—Steamer Fired Into.

CAIRO, Thursday, June 18.

Considerable excitement has prevailed at Columbus and Hickman for a day or two past in consequence of an expected attack by the rebels.

The steamer Platte Valley was fired into at Bradford's Landing on her way up. She was struck six times, one shot penetrating the ladies' cabin. One shot passed through the pilot-house, and two entered the hull where one exploded. A large number of musket and rifle balls also struck the boat. The barber and two soldiers were killed, and several passengers wounded. The boat was attempting to land for cotton, which was claimed by three passengers, who were evidently in collusion with the rebels. They were arrested here to-night.

OUR PORT ROYAL CORRESPONDENCE.

A Raid by a Negro Regiment—Immense Destruction of Property—The Freedman's Inquiry Commission—Gen. Hunter Relieved.

PORT ROYAL, S. C., Saturday, June 13, 1863.

The effects of Gen. HUNTER'S policy begin already to appear; the negro regiments prove signally that it was not only humanity, but practical foresight that determined their institution. The following is an account of a raid made lately by Col. MONTGOMERY, (of Kansas fame,) at the mouth of the Combahee River. This stream was the first one visited by the Spaniards, and VASQUEZ DE AYLLON, in the year 1520, having discovered it, gave it the name of the "River Jordan," for one of the mouths of which "Porte Royale," was mistaken by the Huguenots in 1562.

On the 1st of June, with four companies of the Second South Carolina regiment, and the Third Rhode Island battery, on board the Harriet A. Weed, Sentinel and John Adams, MONTGOMERY landed at Field's Point, and Tar Bluffs, drove the rebels, who had erected there some defences, followed up the river, burned the bridges at the town of Ashepoo—a Summer resort—destroyed rice plantations, storehouses of rice and cotton, and altogether rebel property to the estimated amount of at least two millions of dollars, and brought off seven hundred and fifty negroes. The surprise was complete, interrupting without ceremony the social machinery of the Southerners. Thus, at one field a negro was being led to the stake to receive his lashes when the boats were descried, and the poor fellow, shouting "Yanks coming, Massa!" fled one way, and his master the other. Col. HAYWARD incontinently skedaddled, leaving a fine horse for Col. MONTGOMERY, and a pair of silver-mounted holsters and pistols. The planters were filled with consternation, and could only say, as they looked in wonder upon the black avengers, "Them audacious niggers!" The spectacle among the liberated slaves was unique, but indescribable. Families, parted for months and perhaps for years by a cruel system, now met to part no more. One old man went bowing to every white face, with streaming eyes and clasped hands, crying, "Bress de Lord; de day hab come at last—de day hab come at last!" And the day has indeed come at last; let every freeman hail it.

No sooner had this devoted adventurer slept, after the first enterprise, before he planned a started upon another, his restless spirit seeming be inspired by exercise. This time it was his purpose to take a permanent position upon St. Simon's Island, Florida, where last year Gen. HUNTER proposed to establish his experimental regiment—a most convenient base for operations upon the main, and a delightful spot at the mouth of the Altamaha, and associated with the former history of the coast. It was here that OGLETHORPE'S contest with the Spanish Don of St. Augustine, and the problem of the very existence of the infant colony of Georgia were determined. It contains twelve plantations, and from Frederica—the old town built by OGLETHORPE—to the southern end of the Island, is twelve miles long, mostly arable land, except the centre, which, from sanitary associations, is styled "Bloody Swamp." This again is to become a landmark of pioneer history, and a pivot for the lever of a better civilization, from which MONTGOMERY, at last accounts, with three gunboats, his own regiment, and some companies of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts, (also negroes,) had sallied out, attacking and burning the town of Darien and capturing a schooner loaded with eighty bales of Sea Island cotton.

The people brought off by these raids fall at once under the humane influences of the New and Free South—encamped temporarily in tents about two miles from Beaufort, under the direction of the intelligent and devoted Superintendent, Mr. JUDD. As soon as possible, houses will be built for them, and the blessings of school and church and social example extended to them, also, in the manner which has so signally succeeded with the hundreds that, all over these Islands, reflect from the flattest and blackest Dead Sea the happy light of the new régime.

THE AMERICAN FREEMAN'S INQUIRY COMMISSION.

Antecedents—an incident significant of the profound interest and earnest questions that underlie the public mind upon this subject, and momentous of a policy vital at least to a class, and perhaps to the whole people, if there be truth in the saying that to secure the permanent well-being of our neighbor is the surest and shortest road to our own—a Commission has been appointed by the War Department, with instructions to provide a complete report, by personal examination of all the sources of information, to be hereafter presented to the Government. Upon the facts contained in this report, the wisdom of the nation will base legislation upon so grand a problem as the absolute change of state and the elevation of a people from primitive—nay, worse, the vicious—barbarism that constitutes the dregs of a false civilization, to order, morality and religion. It is, indeed, a great undertaking, and needs to be appreciated, not only by those appointed to perform it, but also by the public for whom it is performed.

The members of the Commission are ROBERT DALE OWEN, of Indiana; Col. JAMES MCKAYE, of New-York, and Dr. HOWE, of Boston: but only Col. MCKAYE visited Port Royal. He was accompanied by Capt. GEO. W. NICHOLS, of Maj.-Gen. FREMONT'S Staff, and your correspondent, who was selected by reason of his familiarity with the Department, to do the clerical work. The investigation has been most thorough, and its results, I think I am not mistaken in believing, will be among the most important in deciding, first, the probability, and, second, the general plan of accommodating the fruits of emancipation to the social, political and religious hygiene of the nation.

Facts were revealed by the investigation respecting these people—concerning their mode of life, their habits of thought, and the strong under-current of their former unhappy existence—of which I was entirely ignorant, notwithstanding my long residence at Port Royal. Col. MCKAYE'S large experience at the North, his admirable tact, his sound judgment and perfect knowledge of human nature, eminently fit him for his work. His personal presence was sufficient to gain for him at once the confidence of the black, and they unhesitatingly opened up to his view the experiences of plantation life, that under Slavery, they were always careful to conceal. Their testimony gives such a black record of South Carolina barbarism and cruelty, that its publication would astonish the people.

Fact—They are found immediately after release from bondage destitute entirely of family relations, "eating upon the hoe" in the field, the family table being a thing unknown. Now, on the contrary, not only in the immediate neighborhood of example and teaching, but upon isolated settlements, and upon plantations, as if instinctively, they have turned to this fundamental principle, whose institution is perhaps the source of all others—the family—the root of the State.

Second—They had had no idea of marital relations. Girls innocently prostituted themselves, and it was the custom to pair and to change pairs, according to fancy or the advice of owners, lustful of breeding. But freedom has begun to recall forgotten purity. Man and wife, parent and child are already among them words of actual significance, and the brute has suddenly taken a human shape. Of course it would be useless in a letter to attempt to enumerate with any detail the points of light discovered by the Commission, but in the most general summary—

Third—From a religion little above fetish superstition—a religion without distinction—that, however prostitute, the girl immediately became "respectable" upon "joining the church," and lying was a vice quite as common as any virtue among church members — so subtly impressible are the sensibilities of this tropical people that no sooner has the sun of Righteousness found for its normal medium an atmosphere—the atmosphere of freedom—than the barren soil, like a recovered swamp land, immediately blossoms, and bears an unsuspected variety and quality of loveliness. To impassive sons of Northern nurture, it would seem almost incredible without eyewitness, that justice and worship, the two great commandments, could show fruit so quickly and remarkably. But are not the seeds already in the soil? The sun does but call them forth, and this is a tropic soil, and freedom's is indeed here a tropical sun.

One principal point of the investigation was as to the expediency of isolating the free blacks. With significant intelligence, these people themselves testify that they need the presence, example and advice of white men to prevent them from sinking. Their own idea seems to be to secure the education of sufficient of their own number in time to become their own teachers, but for the present, at least, their missionaries shall be white men.

This is imperfectly a sketch of the work done by the Commission at Port Royal. Eastern Virginia has already been visited, where the blacks were found indeed more "enlightened," but alas! also more viciously degraded; for the Port Royal people are primitive. It is even suggested that the reason why so fine a harbor was so jealously neglected by Southern commerce was to reserve it for the commerce of a more profitable than legal traffic—the "bark built i' the eclipse and rigged with curses dark" of the Slave-trade—the fact being that very few of these negroes are more than two generations removed from the native-born African. It is proposed next to visit the Departments of the West and Southwest, and afterwards the West Indies, Cuba, San Domingo and the islands of the French—nay, for the most complete elucidation of the magnificent phenomenon, the transition of a people from bondage to freedom—the Russian emancipation system also will be most thoroughly reviewed and reported.

Hail to this Commission! It is a sign that the authorities are indeed in earnest, and the startling light that they must shed upon the horrors of the "consummation of human villainies" will so rouse the true heart of the North that it will be an impossibility for a war between civilization and barbarism, freedom and slavery, nay, Heaven and hell, to end in adulterous compromise. As the people read they will cry "let the rivers flow red to the sea till every single drop of this damned blood eke from the veins of my country." Life is little; the purpose of life is everything.

> "Down let the shrines of Moloch sink,
> And leave no traces where it stood,
> Nor longer let his idol drink
> His daily cup of human blood;
> And rear another altar there,
> To truth and love and mercy given,
> And Freedom's gift, and Freedom's prayer,
> Shall draw an answer down from Heaven."

The Commission has been aided very greatly in its duties by Gen. HUNTER and the other military authorities of the Department. To Gen. SAXTON and Capt. HOOPER, a member of his Staff, it is under special obligations. Capt. HOOPER is a graduate of Harvard, and son of the Massachusetts Congressmen. He is diligent, intelligent, courteous, and so admirably adapted and valuable in his service as to merit this prominent mention.

GEN. HUNTER RELIEVED.

Maj.-Gen. HUNTER has a second time been relieved from the Department of the South, and returns, accompanied by his Staff, on the Arago.

The genuine regret which every man in the Department feels at the news of Gen. HUNTER'S recall to Washington, is slightly tempered by the fact that his successor is Brig.-Gen. GILMORE, their old comrade in arms, who conducted with marked ability the wonderful siege experiment that resulted in the reduction of Fort Pulaski. Whether Gen. GILMORE will ever attempt to bring his engineering skill to bear with crushing weight upon Fort Sumter, I am unable to say; but for the present I am informed no movement in that direction is contemplated. It is more than likely that all the white soldiers in the Department will be sent to reinforce Gen. BANKS, and that the negro army will be intrusted with the protection of the sea islands. Brig.-Gen. STRONG, late Assistant Adjutant-General, with the rank of Major, on the Staff of Gen. BUTLER during the rule of the latter in New-Orleans, will take command under Gen. GILMORE.

Returning North with Gen. HUNTER, are Lieut.-Col. CHAS. G. HALPINE, Assistant Adjutant-General of the Department, and Major DUANE, Chief Engineer of the Staff. Col. HALPINE has been compelled, in consequence of a long-continued and painful affection of his eyes, to seek a respite of twenty days from the labors of his office. At the expiration of his leave he will return to his old post, unless the Government should determine to make him serviceable elsewhere. Major DUANE will return to his former field of labor with the Army of the Potomac. Dr. STIPP, relieved from duty as Medical Inspector of the Department, also goes by the Arago, whose passenger list this time numbers nearly 600. There will be few ladies left in the Department but those associated with the hospitals and the education of the contrabands.

The official notification of the removal of Admiral DUPONT has not yet been received from Washington. The general impression is, however, that it will arrive about the middle of next week on the corvette Tuscarora, with his successor, Admiral FOOTE.

THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE UNION CONVENTION.

Able Speech by Postmaster-General Blair.

A complete report of the speech delivered before the Union Convention in Concord, N. H., on June 17, by Postmaster-General BLAIR, has reached us. After returning thanks for the kind greeting which had been extended him, Mr. BLAIR alluded briefly to the political conflicts which had preceded the rebellion. He showed how the Slavery question had been used to mould and control the policy of the Government, and said that, although very many of the people of the North disapproved the Compromise measures of 1850, they accepted them as a finality. So strong was the feeling in New-Hampshire against disturbing it, that Mr. HALE, who had refused to approve it, considered his career closed, and had determined to remove to this City to enter upon the practice of the law when the repeal of the Missouri Compromise determined him to remain. Mr. BLAIR proceeded:

THE FUTURE.

So much for the past. I draw no unfavorable augures from it for the future. The self-reliance of the American people—the grand feature which distinguishes them among nations—is visible throughout this contest, and remains unshaken to secure our power and freedom. Look over the earth and you will see an Emperor here, an autocrat there, an impotent Parliament representing an upper class, a hereditary King—the instrument of a regency of counties with a mercenary army at their beck disposing of the lives and fortunes of the multitude, in utter contempt of their feelings or opinions. Here we have before us an exhibition of the spirit that pervades, animates, gives impulse to everything that touches the interest of an American people, from the highest to the lowest: men of all parties are here, men of every religious sect, men of all conditions, all callings, all professions, and each of them contributes a share in creating the feeling and the public opinion which is to make or mar the welfare of a continent now stricken by civil war.

NO REVOLUTION.

Among any other than the American people, such a wide-spread civil war—mustering more than a million of men in arms—would portend revolution. Is there a man in this vast crowd who apprehends that the Constitutions, State and National, left us by our fathers, are to be changed in letter or in spirit, by this bloody struggle? Is there one who expects the result to be the driving out of one President by bayonets, and the installation of another—the breaking up of one form of government, and construction of a new one—the periodical catastrophe in revolutionary Mexico, or the permanent severance of our States and of the natural boundaries assigned by Providence to us as a nation? No loyal man anticipates such a revolution from this rebellion: none but bad, ambitious men, who would sacrifice popular institutions, secured by the best Government known to the world, to selfish designs, countenance the idea. The heartless faction of oligarchs, North and South, who consider republican principles an abomination, desire to convert this war, into which the Government has been drawn in defence of its existence, into a revolutionary convulsion for its subversion.

There are

TWO KNOTS OF CONSPIRING POLITICIANS

at opposite ends of the Union, that make Slavery a fulcrum, on which they would play see-saw with the Government, and willingly break it in the middle, and demolish it, to make experiments with the fractions in reconstructions suited to their designs, which are only known as hostile to the well-balanced Constitutions inherited by our fathers. The Calhoun and Wendell Phillips Juntos have both sought the accomplishment of their adverse ends by a common means—the overthrow of the Constitution—CALHOUN'S school would destroy every free principle, because repugnant to the perpetuity and propagation of Slavery universally as the only safe foundation of good government—PHILLIPS' school would subject all our systems of government to the guillotine of revolutionary tribunals, because they recognize the existence of different races among us, of white, red and black—because they repudiate the idea of equality and fraternity in regard to citizenship that tends to produce that amalgamation, personal and political, which would make our government one of mongrel races, and because they authorize legislation, State and National, which may exclude them from taking root in the soil and government of the country. The white man has extruded the Indian race from dominion on this continent, its native born aboriginal inheritor—the African was introduced on it, not as its owner or to give it law, but to be owned and receive law—and under this aspect, the white man as a conquerer has accommodated the constitutions of the country to his own condition—that of the ruling race. The ground which WENDELL PHILLIPS and his followers take, is not merely to alter the law and enfranchise the races held under it as inferior to that holding the dominion by right of conquest, but to abolish the constitutions which recognize that right as established, and admit to equal participation those races hitherto excluded as inferiors.

THE TRUE PLATFORM.

The people who hold the sovereignty in the United States equally abjure the CALHOUN and PHILLIPS doctrine, both looking to a radical revolution to accomplish their opposing schemes. The platform of principles which put Mr. LINCOLN at the head of the Government explicitly denounced both; and every State paper from the hand of the President referring to it, proclaims a policy at war with that of the partisans of CALHOUN on the one hand, and of PHILLIPS on the other. Providentially, the treason hatched under the incubation of CALHOUN has destroyed the whole progeny of mischiefs by means of which he sought to work the overthrow of the Government. Rebellion to overthrow the Constitution compelled the exertion of its War Power, under which has fallen in the rebel States that local institution employed by the assailants of the national system for its ruin. The bondage which rendered the slaves subservient for this purpose, is declared by the President's proclamation to be broken, and if the arms of the United States can maintain its authority, the servitude which the Constitution once made it a duty to tolerate, now becomes, by the fiat of its War Functionary, the malady that must be thrown off for self-preservation. The life of the Constitution is now the death of Slavery. The weapon used to destroy the Government is wrested from the hands of traitors and is a forfeit. The Slavery abolished under the proclamation is the rightful conquest as it is th salvation of our free Institutions. It can never be restored but through their subversion. Into this practical issue CALHOUN'S State Right doctrines resolve themselves. If the people of the United States constitute a nation—have a National Government and can maintain it, his so-called State rights, exerted to destroy it, conclude in treason.

THE WENDELL PHILLIPS SCHOOL.

To what better result do the abolition doctrines of WENDELL PHILLIPS come? Slavery is abolished, as I have shown, by the rebellion and its consequences—by the war and the constitutional means accorded to the Government for its defence. The abolition of Slavery does not content one class of Anti-Slavery men. The Wendell Phillips' school, to arrive at the consummation of their wishes, demand the same sacrifice that CALHOUN'S proselytes make war to obtain—the abolition of the Constitution of the United States. They demand that the different races on this continent, marked by the very terms of the Constitution and the laws made under it as subordinate to the white race asserting full sovereignty over this country, shall be elevated to equality with the race holding it by conquest and whose Constitution and laws specially ordain its appropriation to themselves. This amalgamation in races is more than a revolution in government. It is an attempt to make a fundamental change in the laws of nature and by blending different species of the human race create a hybrid nation. This will prove to be an impossibility. The red, white and black races have mingled very freely on this continent, but the hybrids gradually wear out, while the original stock preserves its original type. The French, from the infancy of discovery on this continent, intermarried with the Indian tribes—but where is the French tribe of Indians to be found? They made the same experiment with the blacks in St. Domingo, and a mongrel race appeared for a time of various tints, but it is gradually vanishing. So the old Spanish blood that mixed with that of the Indians, in Spanish America, has almost run out, and Indians and Spaniards are as incongruous with each other as in the beginning, and the fatal result of this attempted amalgamation is shown in the degradation of both races, and the instability of their Governments.

NO AMALGAMATION.

If the history of the world and the present aspect of both hemispheres did not make manifest the absurdity of the proposed system of mixing the black and white races in the management of a common Government, and blending the two colors to make a third, or rather a piebald people of all colors, the repugnance of caste which has grown up in this country on the part of the white freeman to the black man—contrasted by his servile condition from his first appearance among us, as strongly as by his ebon skin and curled hair—certainly shows that nothing short of insanity could hope to reconcile the dominant, and, I might say, the domineering race, to such a conjunction. When the Northern free States have framed laws prohibiting the colored freedman from obtaining a foothold on their soil, upon what terms can it be supposed that the master race in the Slave States would consent to associate with negroes made free by the hand of war? They would see their State laws and their State rights, as they insist, set aside by the deprivation of their ownership in slaves. This would be just forfeiture. But while the free States of the North excluded the manumitted slaves from their soil, avowing the abhorrent feeling of caste as an insuperable bar to the association on any terms, much less of equality, how could it be asked of the Southern States that toils excommunicated race, surrounded by them as slaves, should be retained, nevertheless among them and admitted as equals and as partners in political power, in defiance of the Constitution of the United States, and the laws even of the Northern States, which brand them with the badge of inferiority and political disability. What would be the attitude of the Anglo Saxon and African toward each other in such relations produced by the triumph of the Free States over the Slave? Would the white man of the South live to bear subjugation to such fellowship? Would not the inextinguishable memory of wrongs on one side, and of admitted mastery on the other, make patient acquiescence on either impossible? All the bloodiest revolutions of ancient and modern times have been those broached by slaves against enslavers.

Our civil war, closing in the manumission of 4,000,000 of slaves, to take equal rank with 6,000,000 of enslavers, would be but the prelude of a servile war of extermination. Can any one doubt, that the military skill and desperation of the master race would reduce the negroes again to subjugation, unless the freemen of the North made common cause with them against their white brethren? The bare statement of this complication makes it apparent, that there can be no peace on this continent on the basis of the ultra Abolitionists who insist on the abolition of existing constitutions to establish negro amalgamation, liberty, fraternity and equality. Yet, I have long ago proclaimed myself unalterably the friend of the liberty, equality and fraternity of the African race, but not in this region, which is devoted by constitutions, laws and fixed usages, to the liberty, equality and fraternity of the race of pale faces. Such commingling of blood, of domestic intimacies, of social, civil and political interests, between the white and black castes is unnatural and fatal to the welfare of both, and, therefore, impossible.

THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN.

The advocates of this hybrid policy know this, but they think the negro so essential to the selfish purposes of their political ambition that, like CALHOUN, they are willing to make him, as well as those who hold him in durance, the victim of their policy. I advocate the President's plan of saving both and ministering to their prosperity and to their elevation in their respective spheres to power and greatness as a people.

This may be done by a gradual segregation of the two races, and assigning to each the regions on this continent and adjacent isles congenial to their natures. The old Roman policy of spreading their institutions and influence abroad in the world, by providing homes for new people drawn into the service, and whom it was not politic and safe to settle in Italy, should be adopted in favor of the unhomogenous dependent people of African descent whom this war will throw upon the hands of the Government as freedmen. Many of them will enlist in the army—multitudes will be employed on the waste lands of the Government in providing for their subsistence. All should be drawn together in military camps on the Roman plan—put under the control of public officers, instructed in the business of self-government, self-defence and self-support, and when employed in the public service amply compensated. Thus, they would be in a state of probation while the Government would have opportunity to provide for their settlement in the suitable regions to which they are invited as colonists. When peace comes and this liberated multitude seek other employment than that servitude under former masters who would render it more intolerable than the slave system, which, while it extorted labor without compensation, yet created such interest in the bodies of the slaves that they were cared for on economical principles, the Government must necessarily become their patron. Placed in this relation, the Government must provide them compensated employment, until they are ready to assume the character of an independent people. This might be done advantageously in the Southern States by opening into ship canals those communications which the enterprise of individuals and the natural aqueducts of the Mississippi have to a great extent opened up from the great artery of our continent around the shores of the Gulf through the Hudson to the Lakes. What a glorious result of the war for North and South, especially the latter, would be this bond of commercial brotherhood—this interception of the waters of all our rivers and bays before they reach the Atlantic, and opening them up to each other out of the reach of the hostile navies that might endanger our commerce, or bring foreign power to the invasion of our homes! The great wall of China—the prodigious military highways through which Rome united her empire over Asia, Africa and Europe, were the works of populations whose necessities placed them as a charge upon the Government.

By such means the process of liberating four millions of bondsmen and then preparing them to assume the attitude of a self-governing nation, might be made to secure to the United States forever their Union, their domestic peace and immunity from foreign invasion!

THE ULTRA-HUMANITARIANS.

Instead of the mutual benefits which the President's plan proposes to draw out of our present adversity, by making the Afric-American race a nation in a fruitful congenial clime, protected in all their rights under the American flag, opening the way to people of our own race to fill their places, and putting an end to the anomalous character of our institutions which destroy our peace, what do those ultra-humanitarians offer? They profess so much philanthropy in the abstract, and such perfect impartiality in judging of human affairs that they seem to think the millennium come, and invite the lion and the lamb to lie down together. They would break up all constitutions, laws and usages, assuming that all antagonisms of interests, of prejudices, of passions, were at an end in a land of fetters and whips, of swords, guns and bayonets in the hands of six millions of incensed masters, and that four millions of their manumitted slaves might be safely trusted to their tender mercies. This is a practical illustration of the Wendell Phillips love for the downtrodden African!

But the Phillipeans probably do not expect the amalgamation, liberty, equality and fraternity theory to be acceptable to the present ruling class, but intend that the Northern white man, while rejecting it for himself, shall enforce it on the Southern white man. Unfortunately for this scheme, the Northern soldier intends becoming a Southern white man himself, and he wants the lands he redeems from nullification for himself and his posterity, and as an inheritance for his race.

The scheme is another birth of that monstrous philosophy which would have discarded the Slave States from the Union and delivered the negroes to perpetual bondage, on the pretence that the conscience of the North might no longer be burdened with responsibility for the crime of Slavery.

THE CONCLUSIONS.

All the propositions of the Abolition faction which is warring on the President come to these conclusions: destruction of the Constitution, and of the white and black races, or incessant wars after the example of the Moors and Spaniards, until the expulsion of the former from Spain. All the early patriots of the South—WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, MADISON, MONROE, JACKSON, CLAY, and others—were the advocates of emancipation and colonization. The patriots of the North concurred in the design. Is the faction now opposing it patriotic or philanthropic? Are they not rather like CALHOUN, working the negro question to accomplish schemes of selfish ambition, and after his method, making a balance of power party of a phalanx of deluded fanatics, keeping the Union and the public peace perpetually in danger, and seeking power in the Government through its distractions?

The author of the Declaration of Independence and his associates declared equal rights impracticable in society constituted of masses of different races. DE TOCQUEVILLE, the most profound writer of the Old World on American institutions, predicts the extermination of the blacks, if it is attempted to confer such rights on them in the United States. It is obvious that an election would be but a mockery in a community wherein there could be no other than black and white parties. In such communities, reason and experience show that one or the other race must be the dominant race, and that democracy is impossible. This is not less obvious to the Phillips school than it is to be Calhoun school who concur in opposing the policy of Mr. JEFFERSON, adopted by the President, intended to effectuate the design of our fathers to establish popular government. They concur in pressing here the antagonism of races, and only differ in looking to different races to give them power. The result of this antagonism, so far as popular government is concerned, would be the same if either could succeed in their schemes, and you would scarcely have much preference between being governed by JEFF. DAVIS, as the leader of the slave power, and WENDELL PHILLIPS, as the leader of the enfranchised blacks. But neither can succeed. Even the Calhoun scheme, matured through so many years of intrigue by men versed in public affairs, and attended with a temporary success, is a failure as a governing contrivance, though potent still to spread ruin widely through the land, and especially to desolate the homes of his deluded followers. The Phillips scheme is the dream of visionaries wholly unskilled in government, and will be a failure from the start. He may in turn make victims of the negroes, as CALHOUN has of their masters. But I think not. They are not ambitious of ruling white men and will, I believe, be contented to set up for themselves in some neighboring and congenial clime on the plan of JEFFERSON and LINCOLN. Here is the real issue with the President. Emancipation is a fixed fact. What next? Shall we take PHILLIPS for a guide or JEFFERSON and LINCOLN? The people will, I am sure, answer wisely.

AFFAIRS IN ILLINOIS.

New Excitements—A Railroad Scheme in the Legislature—The Failure to Agree Upon an Adjournment—Gov. Yates' Proclamation, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Friday, June 12, 1863.

There seems to be no end to our excitements. That caused by the suppression of the Times had not died away before another came in the shape of a railroad bill, which had been smuggled through the Legislature somehow, and which proposed to occupy our principal business and residents' streets with horse railways. As soon as the matter became public, it aroused the indignation of all parties, and for a few days the excitement was general, and rather intense among the residents of some of the streets interested. It was gotten up by a few lawyers of the Copperhead school, and would have been a "big thing" had not Gov. YATES stood in the way. The majority in the Legislature passed it as a party measure. In the hurry of business it was read by its title only, which being "The Wabash Railroad," as read by the Clerk, who, for a consideration, undoubtedly omitted the "Horse," and as it had been introduced by a Senator from the southeast part of the State, our members thought, as a matter of course, that it related to a proposed road in the Wabash River country, instead of our Wabash-avenue. In the House, although its character was better understood, it passed—all the Democrats and a few Republicans voting for it. It was a swindle equal to your Broadway scheme, and would have been worth a million of dollars to the few names in the charter.

While this was in its height, came a dispatch that, the two Houses failing to agree as to an adjournment, the Governor had prorogued the Legislature to the first of January, 1865. Of course, this created a new excitement, and no little rage among the extreme partisans of the majority, who were thus summarily sent to their homes. We heard much about arbitrary power, violation of the Constitution, &c., &c., after the usual manner of Copperheadism; so last evening a mass meeting was held at Metropolitan Hall to indorse the action of the Governor, and to thank him for interposing to protect the rights of our citizens. The meeting was largely attended, Hon. MARK SKINNER presiding. Several excellent speeches were made and strong resolutions adopted. Among the speakers was A. Lt.-Gen. FULLER.

Some are disposed to condemn the Governor's action as unnecessary, and tending to add fuel to the flame of excitement already existing—regarding the Legislature as more likely to disgust the people than to do any permanent injury. This number is few, however, among loyal men. The great mass heartily approve of his exercise of his constitutional power, in ridding the State of a mischievous public nuisance—for such the Legislature had proved itself to be. We are waiting now, patiently, to see what the next excitement will be. As our Provost-Marshal's office is now fully organized and ready to go to work, we are looking for a little trouble from that quarter. Already enrolling officers have been set upon by mobs of Irish women, and it is expected that the experiment will be repeated, and continued until an example is made of some of the rioters.

The Canal Convention has passed out of memory, if one may judge from the general silence that prevails in regard to it.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Naval.

ADMIRAL FOOTE'S ILLNESS.

Late yesterday afternoon Rear-Admiral FOOTE was in a very critical condition at the Astor House. All visitors, save a few family friends were excluded.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT AND CAPT. CRAVEN.

On Monday last the Secretary of the Navy ordered the Naval Retiring Board, which had adjourned to give place to the Stimers' Court of Inquiry, to reassemble at the Marine Barracks. Commodore NICHOLSON, Commodore MERVINE, Commodore BREESE, and Capt. EWEL were present. The case of Capt. THOS. CRAVEN was immediately brought before the Board, that officer's promotion having been suspended in consequence of some difficulty between himself and Rear-Admiral FARRAGUT. The proceedings of the Board in the case have been forwarded to Washington, and yesterday Capt. CRAVEN left this City for Port Royal to relieve Capt. TURNER in command of the iron-clad frigate New Ironsides, now at Port Royal. The difficulty between the two officers mentioned occurred in passing the Vicksburgh batteries.

DEPARTURE OF THE UNITED STATES TRANSPORT UNION.

The United States steamer Union sailed from this port yesterday, for the rendezvous of the South Atlantic squadron. She had on board a large cargo of stores and provisions, a very heavy mail, and a few passengers, none of them above the rank of Lieutenant, save Capt. CRAVEN. As the Union can steam fourteen miles an hour, it is a wonder in naval circles why she was not sent after the Alabama.

ADMIRAL PAULDING IN THE HARBOR.

Rear-Admiral HIRAM PAULDING, Commander of the New-York Naval Station, accompanied by Hon. J. CLARK, Clerk of the Senate, the Ex-Secretary of the Interior, and other notable personages, proceeded in the Commandant's barge to inspect the forts in the vicinity of the harbor. Admiral PAULDING is one of the members of the Harbor Commission.

THURSDAY, June 18—P. M.

There was a further decline of ⅛@1 ₱ cent. on Gold Coin to-day, and Exchange on London was quoted unsettled at about 157½@158½ ₱ cent. The price of Money at call to the Stock Brokers was again firm at 7 ₱ cent. ₱ annum, and there was a good demand on lenders at this rate. As there was more business doing on the Stock Exchange at the reduced figures for the New-York and Western Road Shares, the borrowing among the Brokers was rather more general than on Tuesday or Wednesday. At the same time some considerable loans were called in, to meet the daily requisitions for United States Currency for conversion into the Stock of 1882. The Stock is now coming forward from the Treasury Department on the subscriptions made at the close of the month of May, and early in June. The amount paid into the Treasury on this account to-day is $1,129,200, of which $996,150 was through the Loan Agency, and $133,050 on subscriptions direct at the Treasury office.

The Stock market shows more life to-day, though generally at reduced prices, except for Government Securities, which continue in steady demand at full rates. The chief feature of the day's speculation was the sudden and extreme ups and downs in the Common Stock of the Harlem Company. The price opened yesterday morning at 85 ₱ cent. Before the close of the day it was down to 77 ₱ cent. This morning the price opened before the Board at 72½, and soon fell to 68@69 ₱ cent, though this was more a nominal than actual quotation. At the early Board the first sales were at 69½; then heavy sales at 70@70¼ ₱ cent., followed by a rapid advance to 74@74½ ₱ cent. Soon after the call of the Stock, private purchases were made at 75@77@79, and on the Street at 80@82@82½ ₱ cent At the Second Board the sales returned to 77 ₱ cent., the closing figure of last night. The fluctuations in Hudson River Shares were 2@2½ ₱ cent. In Pacific Mail about the same. In New-York Central, 1@1½ ₱ cent. Erie were comparatively steady, and the Common Shares pretty firm throughout the day. The Western lines did not vary materially from yesterday's last quotation. There was a fair demand for Pittsburgh, Illinois Central and Michigan Southern, but no marked strength in the speculation at the close of the day. The following prices were made at 4 o'clock, as compared with Wednesday night. The market generally quoted dull:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

A telegram from Harrisburgh expresses the opinion that there are now no rebel troops in the State. JENKINS' cavalry left Chambersburgh on Wednesday afternoon, after robbing all the drug-stores in the place and setting fire to a warehouse, and were at Hagerstown on Wednesday night. They took with them a number of the most prominent farmers in the valley. There is a report that another body of rebel cavalry—probably under IMBODEN—have come from Cumberland, Md., to Romney, Va. There is also a report that eight thousand rebels have crossed the Potomac at Williamsport, and marched toward Hancock, Md., stampeding a portion of Gen. MILROY's force which had taken refuge there. These reports are unauthenticated, however. The authorities at Harrisburgh are busy organizing the troops as fast as they arrive, and the work on the fortifications and rifle pits still goes on

A report was telegraphed from Harrisburgh, last evening, that the rebels were returning to Chambersburgh from Hagerstown, but it is not confirmed.

We learn from Harper's Ferry that the rebel forces invested the place on the 16th inst., on the Virginia side, and made an attack, hoping to surprise Gen. TYLER's forces. The latter, however, after some resistance, retired to the Maryland Heights, from whence the rebels were shelled, and compelled to evacuate the town. The rebels then retreated to Williamsport, when Gen. TYLER reoccupied his former position. Travel between Harpers' Ferry and Baltimore is resumed.

It is said that Gen. MULLIGAN has asked to be allowed to remain at New Creek. He thinks he can hold New Creek against a vastly superior force, and will be permitted to remain.

We have this morning, from one of our special correspondents, an interesting résumé of the movements of the rebel army for the past two weeks, since the evacuation of Fredericksburgh was commenced. LEE's plans have, no doubt, been seriously disarranged by the energetic movements of Gen. HOOKER—prominent among which is the attack on STUART's cavalry, at Brandy Station—and by the resistance of Gen. MILROY to the rebel advance up the Shenandoah Valley. At present the rebel army is believed to be much scattered, LONGSTREET and EWELL are in the Shenandoah Valley, while HILL is on the march between Culpepper and Chester Gap, in the Blue Ridge. The force at present across the Potomac is supposed to be the advance guard of EWELL's corps. It is surmised that LEE will attempt to cross the Potomac in the vicinity of Hagerstown, defending the South Mountain passes on his right flank, or to suddenly concentrate in Loudon County, with the view or crossing at Nolan's Ford, where he crossed last year.

Although it would be impolitic to indicate the present position of the Army of the Potomac, we may make the general statement that it is in a "good place." A slight indication of the favorable progress of events will be found in the fact that our cavalry on Wednesday, encountered a portion of STUART's cavalry and whipped them, capturing two squadrons, including eight officers.

The Thirty-seventh, Eleventh and Twenty-second regiments, of this City, left for the seat of war yesterday, to meet the existing emergency. Other regiments will leave to-day.

The Philadelphia Inquirer states, that upon its arrival at that city the Seventh regiment was ordered to report at Baltimore instead of at Harrisburgh. The regiment arrived at Baltimore yesterday, and reported to Gen. SCHENCK.

From the Yorktown Cavalier, of the 16th inst., we learn that great activity prevails on the Peninsula; Maj.-Gen. KEYES is in front, conducting aggressive operations.

The nature of our advices from Vicksburgh leads us to hope for the speedy surrender of the city. Gen BLAIR's recent reconnoissance revealed the fact that there is no enemy within thirty miles of Gen. GRANT's rear.

We hear of another capture by the pirate Florida—the ship Crown Point, which left New-York on the 9th of April, for San Francisco. She was captured and burnt on the 13th of May, in lat. 7° south, long. 34° west.

GENERAL NEWS.

In the Board of Aldermen, yesterday, a communication was received from the Mayor, nominating GEORGE W. BLUNT for City Inspector, vice DANIEL E. DELAVAN, the present incumbent, whose term of office expired last Monday. The nomination was rejected, by 16 to 1. The Mayor sent in another communication accompanying and favoring an application from Gen. WARD B. BURNETT, for an appropriation to aid in the formation of the brigade he is organizing. The subject was referred to the Committee on National Affairs. An application from the City Inspector, for the use of a portion of the dock at the foot of East Twenty-third-street, for dumping purposes, was referred. Mr. FARLEY moved to direct the Clerk to furnish the proceedings of the Board to the Corporation papers designated by the Common Council. Mr. FROMENT questioned the propriety of adopting the motion, because the validity of the section of the law under which the Mayor and Comptroller selected Corporation papers, was now a question before the Courts. Mr. BOOLE disputed this, and remarked that the Courts were only considering the matter in respect to the meaning of the law. The action now proposed would bring the whole question to a direct issue. The newspapers concerned could publish the proceedings or not, as they might see fit, and such of them as chose to publish them, probably, would sue for their pay. Thus, without interfering with the action taken by the Mayor and Comptroller, it could be judicially determined whether the right of the Common Council, under the charter, to select their own advertising mediums, was abrogated. Mr. FROMENT thought this could all be done without adopting the motion made by Mr. FARLEY. Mr. BOOLE replied that it was desired that the papers should have the proceedings furnished to them officially. The motion was carried by 11 to 5. A report in favor of granting the request of the American Institute for a full term lease of Reservoir-square, at a nominal rent, was laid over. Adjourned to Monday, at 1 o'clock P. M.

In the Board of Councilmen a preamble and resolution by Mr. HAYES, respecting Gen. MCCLELLAN, and requesting the Administration to place him "at once in the position which the present crisis demands for the safety of the Republic," was adopted. A motion by Mr. GROSS, directing the Clerk to furnish the proceedings of the Board to the Corporation papers selected by the Common Council, was carried unanimously. The resolution from the other Board, appropriating $10,000 for the celebration of the ensuing Fourth of July, was lost for want of a constitutional vote, which was reconsidered and the paper laid over. The Comptroller reported disbursements to the amount of $60,724 from the Relief Fund, for the fortnight ending on last Saturday, to 15,041 families. The Board adjourned to 4 o'clock P. M, on Monday.

The Annual Commencement of the New-York University was held in Niblo's Theatre, yesterday, Rev. Dr. FERRIS, Chancellor, presiding. The degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on Twenty young gentlemen composing the graduating class, and the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. David Crawford, of Edinburgh, Scotland; Rev. Charles H. Stewart, U. S. N.; Rev. D. McL. Quackenbush, and Rev. F. W. Geisenhainer, of this City, and Rev. C. H. Edgar, of Easton, Penn. The degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on Rev. Marshall Henshaw, of Rutgers College; Hon. H. C. Cary, of Philadelphia, and Judge Allison, of Philadelphia.

There are more than twenty Ohio regiments and batteries of three years' men in the armies about Washington.

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, JAMES MONTGOMERY, ABRAM WART, CHAS. WARD and OSTER HORAHAN, severally pleaded guilty to an attempt to commit grand larceny, and were remanded for sentence. JAMES SHARLEY pleaded guilty to picking the pocket of AGNES E. JONES, and was remanded.

The price of Gold Coin was ¼@1 ₱ cent. lower yesterday than the last figure of Wednesday night. Exchange fell to 157½@158½. Money in good request from the Stock Brokers at 7 ₱ cent. At the Stock Exchange there was much excitement and violent fluctuations in Harlem shares at the extremes of 69½@83 ₱ cent., closing 76 ₱ cent. There was more business also doing in the other Railways. The general market left off dull. The sales of United States Stock of 1882 amounted to $1,129,200.

Breadstuffs and Provisions attracted less attention, yesterday, though buyers had any existing advantage. Cotton was in demand at very firm prices. Groceries were quiet. Petroleum was active and buoyant. Tallow was more freely purchased but at easier rates. Whisky was in moderate request, and was steady. Other articles were essentially unaltered. Moderate freight engagements were effected, the market closing heavily.

What We Must Come To.

We hope there are not many honest, patriotic men at the North, who have not, during the last week, asked themselves in sober sadness: How is it that, after two years of war, with every advantage on our side; with overwhelming superiority in men, money and material; with our ports open, our trade flourishing, our credit good, our people pertinacious and determined beyond example—we find the enemy threatening our own territory with an army equal, if not superior, to our own? How is it that, within a day's march of Washington, we have no better protection against invasion than a levy en masse, and a tumultuous rush to the field of half-armed civilians—undrilled, unofficered and unorganized? How is it that the United States Government, while actually engaged in the task of conquering the whole South, finds itself reduced to the humiliating necessity of abandoning the defence of Northern soil to the frantic energy of State Governors? How is it that, when the second campaign opens, the national authority seems to disappear from our view, and the Union seems to resolve itself into a mere Confederation, each member of it acting for itself, and shouting to the others for help? What is it, in short, that constitutes the military superiority of the South at this moment? What gives it a veteran and disciplined army, equal in number to HOOKER's, and enables it to spread panic through the whole North, and send the authorities of Pennsylvania flying off with the State archives from the State Capital, by merely sending two or three thousand troopers over the border? Why are our young men called off from their business at a day's notice to repulse "raids" three hundred miles away? Why is a great, powerful society like ours thrown into convulsions by the opposition of a brigade of bushwhackers, its business men driven to their wits' ends, and its chiefs forced to make appeals to the patriotism and devotion of private citizens—such as are usually the last resource of despairing energy?

The answer to all these questions is simple. We are engaged in an enterprise which requires that a well drilled, well disciplined and well organized army, ruled by one code, commanded by one chief, should be maintained till it is accomplished. The South recognized this great fact early in the war, and we did not; and hence it is that it is astonishing the world by the greatness of its performance as compared with its means—we, by the smallness of our performance as compared with our means. Armies recruited as ours have been, for nine months, and two years, and three years, with officers elected and appointed by fourteen or fifteen different Governors, with nothing surer to depend on for reinforcements than voluntary enlistment, cannot possibly succeed in a task of such magnitude as we have undertaken. No such feat has ever been accomplished; no man, with any knowledge of war, believes it possible, and our having attempted it has excited both the ridicule and astonishment of the world. It would be impossible even if the North were a unit, and if every orator and writer in it were engaged in stimulating the ardor of our fighting population; if there were no party amongst us engaged, for their own base purposes, in spreading despair and mistrust, in breeding insubordination and in making mockery of discipline. It would be impossible, in short, if the command of the army and every operation of the war were not persistently used to serve the purposes of faction, to divide and distract the nation, and to paralyze the Government.

The people of the North may assure themselves, once for all, that the South cannot be conquered by drafts of militia, either for thirty days or three months, or by levies en masse, or any bursts of enthusiasm, however noble. It cannot be conquered by an army from which thirty or forty thousand men, as recently on the Potomac, have the right to march off home on the eve of tremendous battles, or in the midst of important sieges, as now at Port Hudson. It can only be conquered by an army such as the South has itself in the field—an army raised by conscription, and kept up by conscription, to any number that is needed, for as long as the war lasts. People may as well make up their minds to this. War, as we are waging it at this moment in Pennsylvania, is wasteful, sanguinary and exhausting in the highest degree. If we will not submit to conscription, if we are determined to cow the Government into not enforcing it, or allow others to cow it; if we will insist in prating about the State militia, and rely on Gubernatorial energy and enthusiasm, we must be content with defeats and panics, and make up our minds for a final and irretrievable breakdown. All the thirty days' men that Gov. SEYMOUR, or PARKER, or CURTIN can call into the field for the next ten years, will do no more toward putting down the rebellion or ending the war in any way but by a disgraceful peace, than the explosion of fire-crackers. If people are not satisfied of this now, they will never be satisfied, and we solemnly call upon the Government to apply to the national courage and determination, the supreme and final test of raising, by draft for the war, as many men as it needs. To delay it one minute longer is worse than weakness, and if the country will not submit to this, it will prove, beyond all question, that it is sick of fighting and is for peace on any terms; and whenever this is proven, the Administration will be bound to let it have its way, and wallow in the mire.

The Battle of Winchester—Milroy's Retreat.

The time has not yet come for an impartial judgment on the military operations immediately preceding the late irruption of rebel forces into Maryland. No certain understanding is had of the direction of approach, or of the real strength of the enemy, in the attacks upon Winchester and Martinsburgh; and until we do know all the facts of the case, it would be unfair to condemn Gen. MILROY for a retreat that, on his own showing up to the present time, does not fully admit of justification.

The facts, as now presented to the public, are as follows: Gen. MILROY was charged with the duty of watching the outlet of the Shenandoah Valley, so as to prevent the approach, or ward off an attack, of the enemy from that quarter. He was intrusted with a force considered entirely adequate for this work. He had about 15,000 men and two strongly fortified positions—Winchester and Maryland Heights. He held also Martinsburgh and Berryville, the former an outpost of Maryland Heights or Harper's Ferry, and the latter an outpost of Winchester. Gen. MCREYNOLDS, stationed at Berryville with 3,000 troops, was attacked by the rebels on Saturday afternoon. He held them at bay for some time, but perceiving that he was outnumbered, he started the bulk of his force in retreat toward Winchester, retaining the Sixth Maryland regiment and First Maryland battery in position to resist the enemy and cover the retreat. The retiring force reached Winchester and joined Gen. MILROY; but the Maryland regiment and battery were kept in position till night came on, "when," says the account, "the rebels closing around them in great force, they were compelled to abandon their guns and retreat." The Sixth Maryland regiment, it was at first reported, was "cut up and captured, but a small number escaping," and "Capt. ALEXANDER and Lieut. EVANS, of the artillery, with fifteen men, were all of his fine command that reached Harper's Ferry!"—though this is modified by the subsequent escape of the regiment after its capture. This was a dear price to pay for the safety of the part of MCREYNOLD's force that reached Winchester. The falling back from Berryville was obviously most wretchedly managed.

Gen. MILROY's command in Winchester, reinforced by the remnant of MCREYNOLDS' corps, was now besieged by the rebels. But Winchester was strongly fortified, expressly to meet and resist such an onset of the enemy. It was surrounded with earthworks, had heavy guns planted, and plenty of ammunition. And chiefly, Gen. MILROY had fully 10,000 soldiers, approved in battle, with whom to defend his post. The defence promised to be maintained. Gen. MILROY telegraphed on Saturday that he could hold out until reinforcements came to his assistance. But he kept up the defence only part of one day. On Sunday evening, at 6 o'clock, the rebels carried the outer works of Winchester by storm, and Gen. MILROY made haste, under the cover of night, to get away. We will let him give the story in his own words, in an official dispatch to Washington.

HARPER'S FERRY, Tuesday, June 16.

I am in with the greater part of my command.

The fortifications at Winchester were invested by about 15,000 rebels and 20 pieces of artillery.

They carried my outer works by storm at 6 o'clock on Sunday evening. I spiked all my guns on Sunday evening, and left with the whole of my command at 1 o'clock on Monday morning, bringing all the horses of my artillery and wagons, but was interrupted by an overwhelming rebel force, with artillery, four miles this side of Winchester, on the Martinsburgh road, and after a desperate fight of two hours, I got through. We were pursued by a large cavalry force, who picked up a number of my weary boys.

I think my loss will not exceed two thousand in killed, wounded and missing.

The facts then are, by Gen. MILROY's showing, that 15,000 rebels whipped him out of his fortifications, he having 10,000 men to defend them with. Such a result is inexplicable. He should have been able with such a force to hold his works against 30,000 assailants, and but for his own admission, we could not credit his failure.

Four miles out on the Martinsburgh road, Gen. MILROY's retreating columns were met, he says, by an "overwhelming rebel force," through which, after a desperate fight, he cut his way with a loss of 2,000 men. This loss, added to that of the Sixth Maryland regiment and battery, under MCREYNOLDS at Berryville, to say nothing of the guns and ammunition abandoned to the enemy at Winchester, sum up a very serious total, for which, under the circumstances as known, we discover very slight palliation. With regard to the "overwhelming rebel force" met by Gen. MILROY, on his retreat, from Winchester, some reasonable doubts exist. The Baltimore papers have letters from correspondents, giving minute details of the retreat, and their version is that the rebels attacking Winchester "discovered MILROY's movement, and gave immediate pursuit," and that a "running fight" took place, extending from Winchester nearly to Harper's Ferry. If this statement is correct, and there was no new rebel force at hand, the case looks very unfavorable for Gen. MILROY's reputation. For four days after MILROY's abandonment of Winchester, the rebels driving him out have given no sign whatever of great strength in his front. There is no evidence adduced that any rebel force, except the 15,000 men under EWELL, had any hand in the expulsion of MILROY from his fortified place, and the thrusting of him, with such severe losses, across the Potomac.

The column that attacked Martinsburgh was not "5,000 strong," as at first stated, nor does it appear to have been a part of the force that invested Winchester. It seems to have been an independent cavalry command, of about 2,500 men, under JENKINS, lately returned from their foray upon Grafton and Fairmount, in Western Virginia. We do not know what number of men Gen. TYLER had, who commanded at Martinsburgh. He was joined by the troops from North Mountain, and ought to have been able to cope with JENKINS, but as Gen. SCHENCK ordered him to retreat on Harper's Ferry, it was proper for him to do so. He first, however, sent away toward Hagerstown and Chambersburgh all the Government wagons, about 500 in number, skirmishing with and detaining the enemy till they were well on the way. And it is the chase of this train by JENKINS' troopers that seems to have given rise to all the fact and all the fiction of the grand invasion of Pennsylvania by the rebel army in force.

We do not present these facts in any needless captious spirit, but simply to place in clear record, as nearly as we can, the events of the day as narrated by the chief actors. If the conclusion to be drawn from them is, either that the Government exposed Gen. MILROY with an inadequate force, to meet an overwhelming enemy, or that MILROY was shattered and driven out of his position when he should have held it against double the foe, we cannot on either account ignore the facts of history.

The Copperheads and "the Constitution as It Is."

What means it? The Copperheads have clamored from the beginning about "the Union as it was, and the Constitution as it is." They have done their best to make it their distinctive party motto. And it was not a bad one. While it all had a pleasing sound, the first clause was so indefinite that nobody cared, and the latter so just that nobody dared, to take issue against it. But it seems that the Copperheads are no longer suited with it. They are going to give it up incontinently. At the State Convention which nominated VALLANDIGHAM for Governor they made bold to adopt the following resolution:

"That whenever it becomes practicable to obtain a Convention of all or three-fourths of the States, such body should be convened, for the purpose of proposing such amendments to the Federal Constitution as experience has proved to be necessary to maintain that instrument in the spirit and meaning intended by its founders, and to provide against future convulsions and wars."

"The Constitution as it is," then, is no longer a part of the Copperhead programme. The old organic law of our fathers, which Americans have been wont to consider the perfection of civil wisdom, is now pronounced a very defective affair. It was never put together right, if these Copperheads are to be believed, and the consequence is that everything now is in a jumble. These people, therefore, are for having a new Constitution, such "as experience has proved to be necessary," and one that shall "provide against future convulsions and wars." The "Constitution as it is" has been played out. What good peace men must go in for now is, the Constitution as it ought to be.

Well, it has taken a little time for the Copperheads to screw their courage up to this point, and we suppose we shall have to wait a while longer before they will find heart to tell us just what changes they are for—just what new safeguards they would set up "against future convulsions and wars." But this timidity is all unnecessary. The public is quite as well prepared for Copperhead amendments to the Constitution now as it ever will be; and they may as well take specific shape at once, for all men of sense already know what must be their real character.

The first amendment must be an explicit recognition of the Calhoun doctrine of the right of peaceable secession. Or as FERNANDO WOOD, in his letter to the Convention, phrased it, a securing of "a State sovereignty which shall not recognize military coercion in the central Government as against delinquent States." JAMES MADISON, who had more to do with the conceiving and the forming of the old Constitution than any other man, testified in his famous letter to DANIEL WEBSTER, at the nullification epoch of 1830, that the doctrine of nullification or secession was never for an instant harbored by himself or his associates, and that it has no countenance anywhere in the instrument. This is the plain truth. To establish that doctrine at all, it is necessary that a new Constitution should be established; and it is this which, first of all, impels the Copperheads to seek a new constitutional convention. They perfectly well understand that the Confederates can never peaceably be brought back, unless the right of peaceably departing again is first secured. Could such security be given, probably a peace could be effected; for it would end the present illegitimate Confederacy, only to legalize the creation of a new one at pleasure. The peace men may consistently advocate this change in the Constitution as a peace measure.

The other constitutional expedients for avoiding "future convulsions and wars" would be new guarantees for Slavery. The mere abstention from all interference with the institution, contemplated by the old instrument, would not be sufficient. The amended Constitution would have to include a positive duty of protecting and perpetuating Slavery. It must specifically authorize and facilitate its extension; must legalize the reopening of the African Slave-trade; must interdict all Anti-Slavery agitation in the Free States, and declare the same to be sedition and treason. In other words, the Constitution must be so changed as to make Slavery the "corner-stone" of the Union, just as it is now the corner-stone of the Confederacy. It is believed by these peace men, that the slave power might be persuaded to return to the old Government on such terms—especially when coupled with the reserved privilege of seceding again in peace, whenever the terms failed to be carried out to the letter.

But this nice little plan, unfortunately, has no chance. Even could all the eleven Confederate States be persuaded to accept such concessions, there are no sixteen other States degraded enough to make them; and it would require no less than sixteen of these to make up the "three-fourths" requisite for any change in the Constitution. It is an insult to the Northern people to imagine it. To concede the principle of peaceable secession is to convert the Government into a mere fabric of sand, without a single element of strength, and liable to sink at every tide. To give new guarantees for the extension and perpetuation of Slavery, and its immunity from free discussion, would be to betray every moral sentiment, and to outrage every free instinct. It would require not only a complete unlearning, but a complete unmanning. The thing is impossible. The Northern people cannot so transform themselves if they would. They hate Slavery to-day infinitely more than ever; and if they were determined to concede nothing to it outside of the old Constitution in 1860, most assuredly they will make no new Constitution in 1864 which should concede everything to it. Of course there are individuals who would be willing. There never yet has been a community of men in which there were not some specimens as abject as the very reptiles that crawl in the dust. But no great body of people are ever so. Man was naturally made erect. The Copperheads may exert their subtlety to the utmost, but they will never bring the majority of Northern freemen down to their level. There is to be no abandonment of the Constitution of our fathers—least of all, for the behoof of the most infernal institution on the planet.

We feel a positive relief that these creatures have so publicly abandoned all pretense of continued attachment to the old Constitution, for the vindication of which this war is prosecuted. The pretence was a cheat from the beginning. It is not possible that men who are for submitting to the treason of JEFF. DAVIS should also be for sustaining the Constitution, against the practical operation of which JEFF. DAVIS revolted. There never was such impudence as their cry for "the Constitution as it is." It is pleasant to know that they have at last gained decency enough to leave that instrument to its true preservers. If they think they can get another, more to their mind, we are content;—let them try it. Meantime we are well quit of them.

The New Aspect of the Campaign.

The invasion of Pennsylvania has ended. So, at least, the news of the morning indicates. The invasion, as it appeared to the eyes of the startled country on Tuesday and Wednesday, was a movement of gigantic magnitude; but it suddenly dwindled, yesterday and to-day, until now we must believe that it was only a cavalry raid, under the inevitable JENKINS. On Wednesday we beheld, through the telegraph, three stupendous rebel columns, each accompanied by five thousand cavalry and trains of artillery, filing into Chambersburgh; and to-day we espy the tails of the horses of two or three thousand rebel riders as they gallop out of Chambersburgh, leaving behind them not a soul of the vast host who had entered it by magnetism two days before. One day the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is rocked to its foundations, and the next it is laughing at its fears.

Thus it appears at present. But this cannot be the end of the matter. In fact, it is likely that we have not yet seen its beginning. We have not yet heard of LEE. We have not yet heard of STUART. Somewhere along these Virginia mountain ranges there is a great rebel army, which moved up there with some object yet unaccomplished and undeveloped. It may be that that object was baulked by the rapid northward movement of Gen. HOOKER. But no good General starts out on a campaign of such magnitude as that which LEE had evidently projected with only one fixed line of movement or plan of action—with only one string to his bow. By returning to Fredericksburgh, LEE's campaign would be a ridiculous fiasco—he would have to acknowledge it a failure in its very inception.

We have, by telegraph, from the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, a very lucid statement of the line of movement of the different columns of LEE's army for the last thirty days. This statement shows that the movement has been a deliberate, not a sudden one. And it would seem to point clearly to some such campaign as that of last year in Maryland. It may be that this is still feasible. At all events, we would not advise the army or the country to fall back with the fancied security from which they were so suddenly aroused a few days ago.

EMIGRATION VS. BLOCKADE RUNNING.—The heavy tide of emigration setting from Europe to our shores still excites interest and speculation. The total number arrived at this port from

Jan. 1 to June 17, 1863, is	55,427
To same date, 1862	27,417
Excess in half year	28,010

Ireland, of course, sends a large proportion of this emigration, in which are to be found thousands of able-bodied men, who will either eventually bear arms for the Union, or, what is equally important and serviceable, take the places in fields and workshops of American citizens who do. It is an apprehension of this fact that gives the Tory leaders of England such constant anxiety and distress, and leads to such irritable protests against enlistments in their country for the Union army. But their ingenuity can raise no barrier to the steady stream of emigrants that leave their docks, and cast their lot in America. And what is a constant exhaustion and impoverishment to England is an equal contribution to our national strength and wealth. There is a vast compensation in these facts for the unnatural sympathy and aid that England's aristocrats give to the rebels. We may well afford to let English merchants ruin themselves in trying to run our blockade as long as emigrant ships are permitted to clear her ports for New-York harbor.

Amusements.

BROOKLYN ATHENEUM.—To-night, at the Brooklyn Atheneum, the WEBB sisters will give a second protean character performance. The first was given on Tuesday night, before a very large and well-pleased audience, who laughed and cried, as the fair ones on the stage directed.

COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE.—Mr. DE CORDOVA, the popular and versatile lecturer, is advertised to deliver his very charming lecture on Courtship and Marriage, at Dodworth's Hall, on the 30th inst. The lecture is given gratuitously by Mr. DE CORDOVA, in aid of the Bell Institute, a charitable organization now open at No. 18 West Fifty-fourth-street, for the relief and education of the orphan daughters of volunteers. The object is a deserving one, and the lecture is a good one.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18.

SENATOR WILSON.

Senator WILSON is here on the patriotic errand of persuading the Government to adopt his plan for bringing immediately back into the service the discharged two years and nine months men, in anticipation of the draft. By special inducements, he proposes to get the whole of these experienced soldiers, who are worth treble their number in green troops.

GEN COUCH AND THE COLORED TROOPS.

Gen. COUCH's refusal to muster in a company of colored troops that went to Harrisburgh, was based on the law. Orders were sent him this morning to receive them.

GEN. GILMORE PROMOTED.

Gen. GILMORE, before leaving here to assume command of the Department of the South, was appointed a Major-General.

CHIPPEWAS IN THE FIELD.

A force of Chippewas in Northern Minnesota will soon be organized to march against the hostile Sioux who infest the valley of the Red River of the North. This force will act in conjunction with a small mounted body of white soldiers, who will be recruited on the frontier settlements. Commissioner DOLE has received a letter from the Chippewa Chief, ROLE-IN-THE-DAY, promising to assist the Government in this enterprise.

THE MINNESOTA CLAIM.

Ex-Gov. RAMSAY, of Minnesota, is here, with claims against the Government growing out of the late Indian troubles in that State, amounting to $300,000. Congress appropriated $225,000 for the payment of these claims, which the Commissioners are now employed in adjudicating.

DISMISSED.

By order of Gen. ROSECRANS, Col. JOSEPH D. HAYFIELD, Eighty-ninth Ohio Volunteers, has been dismissed the service. He had previously been convicted by Court-Martial of the charge of speaking disrespectfully of his superior officer, incompetency and conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline.

TO BE SHOT.

REUBEN STOUT, private in Company K, Sixtieth Indiana Volunteers, has been sentenced by a Court martial to be shot. His crime is murder. The verdict of the Court has been approved by Gen. DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS,

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18.

INCIDENTS AT PORT HUDSON.

An officer with BANKS' army relates in a private letter an incident which occurred during a temporary truce at Port Hudson, on the 27th of May. He availed himself of the opportunity this afforded to ride up to the rebel works as close as he could, to get a good view of them, when he saw a regiment of the enemy throw down their arms, and heard them give three cheers and exclaim, "We surrender." The rebel officers at once approached them, and with drawn swords and pistols overpowered and controlled them, and compelled them to take up their arms and resume their position.

The same officer, at a truce entered into the next day for the purpose of looking after the dead and wounded, while riding as near to the rebel lines as he could get, was hailed by a Confederate officer within the works with the question, whether he did not think, upon reflection, that he was coming nearer than was exactly proper. Our officer replied in the negative, saying that he had men wounded and killed as near the enemy as he himself then was. A conversation then ensued, in which the rebel officer spoke of SHERMAN's charge of the preceding day, and remarked that "inside they regarded it as the finest thing of the war." Our officer did not belong to SHERMAN's division.

IRON-CLADS IN THE WEST.

THE WAR IN TENNESSEE.

Bragg Believed to be Preparing for a Movement.

Buckner also to Move from East Tennessee into Kentucky.

MURFREESBORO, Thursday, June 18.

BRAGG has undoubtedly received reinforcements of three brigades, viz: BATES', CLAYTON'S and CHURCHILL'S. These, with BROWN'S brigade of MCCORMICK'S division, left behind, form the new division of STEWART, in HARDEE'S corps. BRAGG now has eighteen brigades of infantry and cavalry. There are indications that, in cooperation with BUCKNER at Knoxville, he is about to assume the offensive, and invade Kentucky, striking at about Monticello or Carthage, in East Tennessee.

BUCKNER has a large force, and is speedily organizing for offensive operations. The exempted men who have been gathering saltpetre and nitre in East Tennessee have been armed by BUCKNER, to guard his rear, and aid in gathering the immense crops of wheat.

The Union men, who planted wheat largely in the hope of Gen. BURNSIDE reaping it, have turned their stock into the fields to destroy the wheat now ripening. They despair of the Union troops reaching their district to avail themselves of the crops.

Gen. GAGEY'S brigade of North Carolina troops occupy Cumberland Gap.

BUCKNER has published an order, threatening deserters, saying that all officers absent without leave will, on the 20th of this month, be conscripted and forced to serve in the ranks.

The lowest estimates state BRAGG'S force at 40,000 men.

KNOXVILLE advices say that Gen. GRANT will undoubtedly take Vicksburg, then flank Jackson from below, capture Port Hudson, and strike at Montgomery and Mobile at the same time.

Col. BRADFORD, commanding the post of KNOXVILLE, advertises in the Register for the apprehension of Capt. J. S. MATTHEWS, of the United States Army, who escaped from the jail at KNOXVILLE on the 30th of May, where he had been confined on a charge of bridge burning.

GEORGE LYLES and GEORGE WILLIAMS were hung today, for the murder of ADAM WEAVER. This murder was commited within the rebel lines.

PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS.

Proceedings of the Democratic State Convention at Harrisburgh—Nomination of Judge Woodward for Governor—The Resolutions, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

HARRISBURGH, Wednesday, June 17, 1863.

The Democratic Convention met at two o'clock. The Committee on organization reported immediately and thus defeated the ambitious tyros who wanted to spread themselves on the "questions of the day." The President is P. FINDLEY PATTERSON, and thirty-three Vice-Presidents are appointed. Mr. PATTERSON addressed the Convention in very few words. He followed the lead of the Albany Democrats, who addressed President LINCOLN. He said the object of the Convention should be the good and prosperity of the Democratic party, the only party that was for a restoration of peace and prosperity. [Cheers.]

Thereupon commenced the great fight on the admission of the delegates from Philadelphia. The dispute was between THEODORE CUYLER and JOSEPH MONHEIMER. The difference between those two gentlemen is only as to what particular shade of copperheadism each is entitled to. CUYLER is rather the darker of the two. Mr. NEBINGER moved to refer the whole matter to the delegation from Philadelphia. To this Mr. LAMBERTON objected very energetically, and said that it was very probable that that delegation might have been "set up" for the occasion, whereupon he was requested by BILLY MULLIGAN, who is now in full feather, to "dry up" and sit down. Mr. MULLIGAN went through a long and interesting series of calisthenics during the debate, brandishing his arms about, and abusing other members not of his persuasion, as he did Mr. LAMBERTON, in good set terms. BILLY was peculiarly felicitous in his line. Mr. CAMPBELL, of Philadelphia, was in favor of the reference, and consequently escaped the dangerous animosity of Mr. MULLIGAN. Mr. MONHEIMER commenced to talk against time, but finding time rather too much for him, eked out his speech by requiring the Clerk to read all the documents connected with the affair. Mr. CUYLER and his friends were not to be humbugged in this way, and listened very patiently until he had finished, when Mr. CUYLER himself took the floor, and argued in favor of his own claims. Mr. LAMBERTON moved that THEODORE CUYLER be admitted to the floor as a delegate. The yeas and nays were taken and resulted in yeas 54, nays 72. So MONHEIMER wins. This is considered a test vote, and is supposed to defeat WITTE, who is very ultra in his views and is known particularly for his violent hatred of GOV. CURTIN.

T. W. HUGHES offered a resolution that the Committee on Resolutions be appointed in the same way as that on organization, one from each Senatorial District, and that all resolutions referring to the platform be referred to that Committee. Mr. CAMPBELL, of Philadelphia, assumed that this measure was intended for the purpose of gagging him, and objected to the operation. But the resolution passed and Mr. CAMPBELL was inhumanly left in a choking condition. Regardless of his misery the Convention adjourned at 4 to meet again at 5½ o'clock.

The Convention assembled again at 5½ o'clock.

The resolutions were presented approving the resolutions passed 13th April last, and adding:

Resolved, That we again renew our vows of fidelity to the Constitution of the United States, the great charter for which our fathers struggled and fought, and which was established, as they themselves expressed it, "to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and posterity."

Resolved, That inasmuch as the Constitution embodies the only guarantees we have for public liberty and private right, as without it we can have no hope of protection from bloodshed, spoliation and anarchy—the man who sneers at "the Constitution as it is" proves himself to be deficient in the first element of patriotism; and any officer of the State or Federal Government who swears to support the Constitution, and afterwards, with that oath on his conscience, wilfully violates it, is wholly unworthy of public confidence.

Resolved, That among the rights which the Constitution provides to every citizen, is that of being secure in his life, liberty and property, so that he cannot be deprived of either without due process of law, a fair trial by a competent judge and a jury of his neighbors, with witnesses to confront him and counsel to defend him. This is so just in itself, so necessary to the happiness of the people for whom all government is made, and so plainly written down in the Federal Constitution, and in all the State Constitutions, that any person who can understand it has not, in our opinion, the mental capacity which fits him for public station.

Resolved, That we have heard with intense alarm and deep indignation that some of our political opponents claim for the President of the United States a power hitherto wholly unknown in America, and never exercised in Europe or Asia, except by the most despotic monarchs, namely: the power to arrest free citizens for the expression of their honest opinions on public affairs; and that the President has not only presumed to exercise this power himself with the moderation and mercy which his own nature might promise, but has delegated it to many subordinates, and they again to others in every part of the country, until its hideous presence is seen and felt all over the land.

Resolved, That among the numerous officers to whom the President has given this terrible power above the laws and above the people, there must, in the nature of things, be a large proportion who are totally incapable of wielding it either honestly or wisely—low politicians filled with partisan rancor, knaves who do not care for justice, and ruffians who delight in trampling it under foot; and therefore we are not surprised to learn that the worthiest men have been torn from their families, judges knocked down on the bench, ministers of the Gospel imprisoned in loathsome dungeons, and respectable women treated with a brutality which it would be indecent even to name—and all this, in many cases, without a pretence that the victims were guilty even of a political offence, much less of any crime against the laws.

Resolved, That free government cannot exist without a free press, and the Constitution of this State, as well as that of the United States, has declared that it shall be free. Those persons, therefore, in office or out of office, who attempt to suppress books and newspapers by violence are the enemies of this Government and ought to be themselves suppressed.

Resolved, That we heartily thank the lion-hearted Democracy of Ohio for the manly vindication they have given to the Constitution against the great crime committed upon it in the arrest and deportation of CLEMENT L. VALLANDIGHAM, and we assure them of our cordial sympathy in the great struggle they are making for their undoubted rights.

Resolved, That the plain duty of the Chief Magistrate of this Commonwealth requires him to use whatever power the law has placed in his hands to protect the State and the people from lawless outrages, come from what quarter they may, and no man is fit to be Governor of this State who will consent to hold his own liberties and let the people hold theirs at the mere will of the Federal Executive.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Pennsylvania has been ever true to the cause of the Union. It was in the name, and for the sake of the Union, that our party was made; that we denounce the least insinuation that the Democratic party of America now, or ever has entertained, or ever can entertain, the slightest sympathy with the present gigantic rebellion, or with traitors in arms against the Government, or would ever consent to peace upon any terms involving a dismemberment of the Union, as utterly unjust; and in proof of this, we point with exultation to the lavish contributions to the war in blood and treasure heretofore and now being made by the hundreds of thousands of Democratic citizens, who were among the first to fly to the rescue of the Union and peril their lives in its defence.

Resolved, That as the true friends of the Union, and feeling a profound anxiety for its fate, we claim, and will exercise, the right to consider, discuss, ascertain and urge in becoming terms upon the people and the constituted authorities, whatever measures will, in our judgment, be most likely to place and keep the whole nation and Union together under one Federal Government.

Resolved, That when this war began, we had the solemn pledge of the Federal Administration, and of the party which placed it in power, as expressed in the resolution passed by Congress on July 22, 1861, that it "is not waged on their part in any spirit of oppression, or for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, or purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of those States: but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution, and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality and rights of the several States unimpaired; and that as soon as these objects are accomplished, the war ought to cease." But the Federal Administration, acting under the influence of a small faction of ultra Abolitionists, always opposed to the Union, and without the consent of the great mass of the people, has totally changed its ground, avowing and proclaiming its purpose to be wholly different, and thus it has greatly allayed our just hope of peace.

The Convention then proceeded to nominations for Governor.

Hon. GEORGE W. WOODWARD having received the largest number of votes, was declared the nominee of the Convention, [tremendous cheering,] and he was afterward declared the unanimous nominee of the Democratic party of the State for Governor of Pennsylvania.

VICTOR E. PIOLETT moved that WALTER B. LOWRIE be made the nominee for Judge of the Supreme Court by acclamation, which was agreed to amidst applause.

A resolution was adopted instructing the Chair to appoint the Chairman of the State Central Committee, subject to the approval of the candidate for Governor.

THE PIRATE FLORIDA.

The Ship Crown Point Captured and Burned.

STATEMENT OF CAPT. GIET.

The following is Capt. JOHN N. GIET'S statement of the capture of his ship by the Confederate steamer Florida, dated on board Confederate steamer Florida, May 13, 1863, lat. 7° south, lon. 34° west, and 70 miles northeast from Pernambuco:

Sailed from New-York in the good ship Crown Point, April 9, for San Francisco. She was 11,000 tons burden and owned by CURTIS & PEABODY, of Boston. Nothing of importance occurred until the above date, when at 10 A. M. the report of "Sail ho!" on the starboard beam was given; at the same time there appeared the spars of a vessel steering direct for us. The ship making only five knots, I made up my mind she must be the Florida or Alabama. At 11 A. M. she was alongside, and hailed us, where from and bound, at the same time lowering a boat to board us, my ship lying to with maintopsail to the mast; saw the steamer's crew at quarters and guns pointed, she flying English colors.

The boarding officer, Lieut. STONE, came on board and an armed prize crew, taking charge of the ship as a prize to the Confederate steamer Florida. Eight of my crew joined the steamer at once.

Myself with my papers and the eight deserters went on board the steamer in the same boat, when Capt. MAFFIT informed me he must burn my ship in accordance with strict orders from his Government, and could not accept bonds, unless the cargo was neutral. Calling my entire fitout contraband, it was seized.

My chief mate remained on board the ship—to which I had returned—with me and family until 7 P. M.—and after taking out such of the cargo—such as sugar, oysters, whisky, &c., &c., together with a large amount of clothing and blankets—some of the men changing their old clothes for new; at 1 A. M., 14th, she was set on fire and destroyed, when the Florida steered off N. E., and after daylight no more was to be seen of the Crown Point. May 15, was promised to be landed to-day at Natal, Rio Grande del Norte, but falling in with land twenty-five miles to leeward and abreast of Cape St. Roque, stood to the S. E.; at 3 P. M. made a steamer, and fearing she might be a United States cruiser, would not go into port, and stood off east. May 16, at 3 P. M., came to anchor on the north side of the Roceas Shoals and Island, in ten fathoms, the Captain going on shore and bringing off plenty of very fine birds' eggs. May 17, remained at anchor during the day, the crew in parties visiting the shore. May 20, at 3 P. M., made a sail and steamed for her. She proved to be the Danish brig Virginia, for New-York. She was brought to by a gun, the steamer under British colors. Capt. VON EHRING, of the brig, having but little room, could take but few of us, and being short of provisions. Capt. MAFFIT promised to send provisions enough to last us home and back again. At 7:30, myself, wife, and two boys, chief mate, second mate, cook, stewardess, &c.—10 in all—got on board the brig, and found most generous MAFFIT had sent us one barrel of bread, one of beef, ten pounds of sugar, and a little tea.

Capt. GIET, his lady, two mates, Messrs. DENHAM and TOWNS tender their thanks to Capt. JOHN VON EHRING, of the Danish brig Virginia, for his kindness to them during the passage to New-York.

JOHN N. GIET,
Late Master ship Crown Point.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 18.

The ship Crown Point was insured against capture for $80,000, principally in Boston.

Banquet to Brig.-Gen. Meagher.

Yesterday evening a banquet was given to Gen. THOMAS F. MEAGHER by his friends and admirers at the Astor House, on which occasion a medal was presented to him. The number of tickets was limited.

The dinner was ordered for 7 o'clock. The dining-room was beautifully dressed with American flags, supported by others, on which were inscribed the names of the different engagements in which Gen. MEAGHER has distinguished himself.

SAMUEL SLOAN, Esq., occupied the Chair, and after justice had been done to the good things, a number of appropriate toasts were drunk. The Chairman, in an appropriate address, gave the toast of the evening:

Gen. Thomas F. Meagher—Our worthy and esteemed guest.

The applause that followed the toast was almost indescribable, and lasted for some time. After silence and order were restored, Gen. MEAGHER replied. After thanking the company for the honor conferred upon him, he took a retrospective glance at the war since its commencement; the part he had enacted in it, and how he had been impelled to join the ranks of the Union. [Applause.] He referred next to his native country, and the tyranny of both England and France toward their people, as well as their invidious feelings toward this country. He spoke against peace in the present aspect of affairs, and would do so to the end; and there was not a man of the Irish brigade who would not do the same. [Applause.] It was only the bankrupt money brokers who wished for peace to repair their shattered fortunes. [Applause.] There was not a soldier of the Army of the Potomac who would not do the same, and that, too, until victory crowned their arms. [Loud cheers.] They were conjured, never, never, never, to make peace with the enemies of this Republic. [Great applause.] And never to cease pushing on the war with the same energy as ANDREW JACKSON would have pressed it, until one Country, one Constitution prevailed. The General resumed his seat amidst vociferous cheers.

The next toast was:

"The City of New-York."

Mayor OPDYKE, on being called upon, returned thanks in a short and appropriate address. He paid a high compliment to Gen. MEAGHER for his gallantry, independence and great eloquence, and thanked him for the able defence he had made in behalf of the present war.

Gov. NYE, on being called on by the Mayor and the gentlemen present, made a speech. The City of New-York was the commercial Metropolis of the New World, but her prouder boast should be that she was the City of a loyal and devoted people. [Applause.] There was not a river that ran throughout the land but contained revolutionary blood, and he was sure the sons of New-York would try to retain what their ancestors had gained in the great revolution. [Applause.] Where he lived the people were loyal, and they did not allow treasonable sentiments to be uttered, or people to cry peace while others cried war. [Great applause.] When he heard men talk so loud about freedom of speech he joined in it, and men had a right to speak. But men had no right to utter a great lie for the purpose of subverting a grand Republican Government, and he would cram Fort Lafayette so thick with such men that their legs would stick out of the holes. [Hisses and groans followed, and considerable confusion.]

CHAIRMAN—If I am to be Chairman of this meeting I hope I shall be sustained. I am determined I shall.

ANOTHER GENTLEMAN—When I saw certain gentlemen in this room this evening, I knew it would come to this.

CHAIRMAN—When Gov. NYE is in order I shall support him. When I speak I do speak, but no one but a snake will hiss. [Applause and hisses.]

Gov. NYE proceeded. He said, from Bunker's Hill to Yorktown his ancestral blood had run. [Applause.] No man loved his country who deserted her in the hour of peril and supported the rebellion. [Loud applause.]

When Gov. NYE had finished, hissing again commenced, and a voice called out, "Police!"

The next toast was drank by the company standing, and in solemn silence. It was:

"The Memory of the Heroic Dead of the Irish brigade."

GEORGE CROMWELL, Esq., then entertained the company with a song suited to the occasion for the "Irish brigade."

The Chairman gave the next toast. It was

"The Health of Lovely Woman."

Mr. FIELDS responded in a humorous vein, and paid a high compliment to the female character. He then said he was one who believed in the right of free discussion, and he would, and the class to which he belonged would support free discussion and free speech. [Applause.] These were the inalienable rights of man. [Renewed applause.] When he, at the commencement, yielded in supporting the Government, he did not yield to sweep away the pillars of the Republic and the Constitution, to extinguish free discussion and free speech.

During the delivery of his speech Mr. FIELDS was repeatedly hissed, and cries of "Sit down," "Put him out," were profusely lavished.

The company soon afterward separated, after having a toast to the Press.

THE GOLD MEDAL.

The medal presented to Gen. MEAGHER is of solid gold, bearing an appropriate inscription, and of elegant design. It was manufactured by TIFFANY & Co.

LETTER FROM GEN. SICKLES.

The following letter was received from Gen. SICKLES:

BLOOMINGDALE, NEW-YORK, June 18, 1863.

GENTLEMEN—Until the last moment I have indulged the hope of being able to attend the banquet in honor of the Irish brigade, and its late Commander, Gen. MEAGHER, but I find myself reluctantly compelled, under the advice of my physician, to decline the invitation. I must content myself, therefore, with a grateful acknowledgment of your courtesy, and the expression of my good wishes for the fame and fortunes of the gallant corps and its distinguished Chief, whose services you will commemorate this evening.

It has not escaped the notice of the people of this country that, very soon after Gen. MEAGHER became a citizen of the United States, instead of announcing himself as a candidate for civil offices of ease and emolument, his sword was drawn as a Captain of one of the companies of the Sixty-ninth regiment, in defence of the Government to which he had pledged his allegiance. Offered a commission in the Regular Army, as a recognition of gallant conduct in the battle of Bull Run, he declined, with ingenuous diffidence, this flattering opportunity to adopt the profession of arms, and when troops were most needed gave the commanding influence of his name and example to the reorganization of the Irish brigade.

Hastening to the field, at the head of three regiments of citizen soldiers, raised in a very short period, this brilliant officer and sturdy patriot has forever associated himself and his gallant command, with the history of the Army of the Potomac and the chivalry of the Irish race.

If it be honorable to fight for the country of one's birth—for homes, and traditions, and lineage—it is glorious to see the exile from despotism battling for Liberty and Order, in the land which offers a career and a future to every good citizen.

The American, whether native or adopted, who refuses to take up arms for his country, is unworthy of the name; he should no longer enjoy the rights and immunities of an American; he should be disfranchised and left to the most desolate of banishments, the scorn of the brave and the sneers of the loyal.

Once more let me applaud the just appreciation of merit which inspired the honors awarded to the Irish brigade. If I may be permitted to allude to another organization, with which my own fortunes and affections have been more identified, it is only to recall the hearty affection and downright good fellowship which exists between the Irish brigade and the Excelsior brigade—the twin brigades of the City of New-York, on whose standards the "shamrock" and the "Stars" have been so often borne, side by side, with the dash of the Celt and the persistency of the American.

Long life and prosperity to my friend, Gen. MEAGHER.

Very respectfully, D. E. SICKLES,
Maj.-Gen. U. S. A.

Messrs. JOHN RRYAN, DANIEL DEVLIN, WALTER MAGEE, JOHN SAVAGE, JOHN BUHLER and B. O'CONNOR, Committee, &c.

THE LATEST NEEDLE NEWS.—Those of our readers who have WHEELER & WILSON Machines in their families—and who has not?—will be pleased to learn that still another improvement has been added to their invaluable home companions—a "trimmer," so called from its being designed to "trim" ladies' dresses. This little attachment stitches braid of any width on one edge only: and really, when one observes the hundreds of elegant robes decorated around the skirt with half a dozen rows of braid, more or less, now worn, it is surprising that this improvement was not sooner "thought of." There is no computing the weary hours of labor its steel and crystal circlet will economize.—N. Y. Express.

SCRANTON COAL AT AUCTION.

NEW YORK, June 15, 1863.

This Company will hold their fifth regular monthly auction, on WEDNESDAY, the 24th day of June, 1863, at 12 o'clock noon, at the rooms now used as the Merchants' Exchange, Nos. 26 and 28 Exchange-place, corner William-st., at which time they will offer, by SAMUEL D. ISAACS, Auctioneer,
3,000 TONS OF FRESH MINED SCRANTON COAL,
embracing all the usual sizes, and deliverable at their depot, Elizabethport, N. J., after the 1st of July next. They will report such auction sales on or about the 26th of each month, during the year 1863.

The sale will be positive. Each lot put up will be sold to the highest bidder on bids, in any form whatever, being made for account of, or on behalf of the Company.

Fifty cents per ton, in bankable funds, to be paid at the time and place of sale, and the balance in like funds, on receiving the order for the coal, which must be called for within ten days thereafter, and the coal taken away within thirty days from the day of sale, unless navigation is obstructed. Buyers who wish, however, can have an additional thirty days for taking the delivery of their purchases, by making a further deposit of fifty cents per ton, within the ten days above specified. Interest, at 7 per cent. per annum, will in such case be charged on the balance, from the time stipulated for payment until paid; and twenty-five cents per ton to cover the expense of stocking the coal to be paid on delivery of order.

The other conditions of sale will be substantially those hitherto accepted by all purchasers by private contract, of coal deliverable at Elizabethport, so far as applicable. The coal will be delivered direct from the cars on their arrival from the mines, when practicable—otherwise from the stock. These conditions will be modified to meet the wants of ocean steamers, whose arrival cannot be definitely fixed. C. R. ROBERT, President.

FINANCIAL.

LAKE ERIE AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND BONDS.

The Lake Erie and Pacific Railroad Company, in the State of Indiana, now offer for sale their entire issue of $890,000 First, and only, Mortgage Bonds, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually in the City of New-York.

These bonds are secured by a DEED OF TRUST, constituting the FIRST and ONLY lien upon the entire Road, its franchises, appurtenances, rolling stock, &c.

Its route is along the White Water Valley, from Rushville to Union, a distance of about sixty miles, and passes through the richest, best cultivated and most densely populated portion of the State of Indiana.

The road is the CENTRAL SECTION of the otherwise completed TRUNK LINE, connecting the great Southwest at LOUISVILLE, Ky., on the Ohio River, and at an early day with TOLEDO and SANDUSKY, on Lake Erie.

The Company is wholly without debt (except its bonded debt) and being strong in its local traffic, and connecting with roads that must necessarily largely increase the volume of its revenues, the BOARD OF DIRECTORS, with great confidence, invite the attention of capitalists to these securities, believing that they offer an opportunity for a first-class railroad investment, than which, in their judgment, there is no better to be had.

The published exhibits of the Company, together with a map showing the locality and advantages of the Road, can be had from either of the Trustees of the Deed of Trust, in this City, named below, and from either of whom the bonds are only to be had.

AFFAIRS IN REBELDOM.

The Dismissal of the British Consul at Richmond.

MR. BENJAMIN'S EXPLANATION.

The Great Cavalry Fight on the Rappahannock.

Severe Strictures of the Richmond Press.

THE BRITISH CONSUL AT RICHMOND.

We give below, from the Richmond Sentinel of the 12th instant, a dispatch of the Secretary of State of the Confederate States to Mr. MASON, their Commissioner in England, which makes known the causes of the late revocation of the exequatur of the British Consul at the port of Richmond, in doing which Mr. BENJAMIN takes occasion to explain the grounds of JEFF. DAVIS' action and the views which govern the policy which he is pursuing. This dispatch is numbered 24:

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE, RICHMOND, June 6, 1863.

SIR: Herewith you will receive copies of the following papers:

A. Letter of GEORGE MOORE, ESQ., Her Britannic Majesty's Consul in Richmond, to this Department, dated 16th of February, 1863.

B. Letter from the Secretary of State to Consul MOORE, 20th of February, 1863.

C. Letters patent by the President, revoking the exequatur of Consul MOORE, 5th of June, 1863.

D. Letter inclosing to Consul MOORE a copy of the letters patent revoking his exequatur.

It is deemed proper to inform you that this action of the President was influenced in no small degree by the communication to him of an unofficial letter of Consul MOORE, to which I shall presently refer.

It appears that two persons, named MAHONY and FARRELL, who were enrolled as conscripts in our service, claimed exemption on the ground that they were British subjects, and Consul MOORE, in order to avoid the difficulty which prevented his corresponding with this Department, as set forth in the paper B, addressed himself directly to the Secretary of War, who was ignorant of the request made by this Department for the production of the Consul's commission. The Secretary of War ordered an investigation of the facts, when it became apparent the two men had exercised the right of suffrage in this State, thus debarring themselves of all pretext for denying their citizenship; that both had resided here for eight years, and had settled on and were cultivating farms owned by themselves. You will find annexed the report of Lieut.-Col. EDGAR, marked E, and it is difficult to conceive a case presenting stronger proofs of the renunciation of native allegiance, and of the acquisition of de facto citizenship, than are found in that report. It is in relation to such a case that it has seemed proper to Consul MOORE to denounce the Government of the Confederate States to one of its own citizens as being indifferent "to cases of the most atrocious cruelty." A copy of his letter to the counsel of the two men is annexed, marked F.

The earnest desire of this Government is to entertain amicable relations with all nations, and with none do its interests invite the formation of closer ties than with Great Britain. Although feeling aggrieved that the Government of Her Majesty has pursued a policy which, according to the confessions of Earl RUSSELL himself, has increased the disparity of strength which he considers to exist between the belligerents, and has conferred a signal advantage on our enemies in the war in which Great Britain announces herself to be really and not nominally neutral, the President has not deemed it necessary to interpose any obstacle to the continued residence of British Consuls within the Confederacy, by virtue of exequaturs granted by the former Government. His course has been consistently guided by the principles which underlie the whole structure of our Government. The State of Virginia having delegated to the Government of the United States, by the Constitution of 1787, the power of controlling its foreign relations, became bound by the action of that Government in its grant of an exequatur to Consul MOORE. When Virginia seceded, withdrew the powers delegated to the Government of the United States, and conferred them on this Government, the exequatur granted to Consul MOORE was not thereby invalidated. An act done by an agent while duly authorized, continues to bind the principal after the revocation of the agent's authority. On these grounds the President has hitherto steadily resisted all influences which have been exerted to induce him to exact of foreign Consuls that they should ask for an exequatur from this Government as a condition of the continued exercise of their functions. It was not deemed compatible with the dignity of the Government to extort, by enforcing the withdrawal of national protection from neutral residents, such inferential recognition of its independence as might be supposed to be implied in the request of an exequatur. The Consuls of foreign nations, therefore, established within the Confederacy, who were in possession of an exequatur issued by the Government of the United States prior to the formation of the Confederacy, have been maintained and respected in the exercise of their legitimate functions, and the same protection and respect will be accorded to them in future, so long as they confine themselves to the sphere of their duties, and seek neither to evade or defy the legitimate authority of this Government within its own jurisdiction.

There has grown up an abuse, however, the result of this toleration on the part of the President, which is too serious to be longer allowed. Great Britain has deemed it for her interest to refuse acknowledging the patent fact of the existence of this Confederacy as an independent nation. It can scarcely be expected that we should, by our own conduct, imply assent to the justice or propriety of that refusal, now that the British Minister accredited to the Government of our enemies assumes the power to issue instructions and exercise authority over the Consuls of Great Britain residing within this country; nay, even of appointing agents to supervise British interests in the Confederate States. This course of conduct plainly ignores the existence of this Government, and implies the continuance of the relations between that Ministry and the Consuls of Her Majesty resident within the Confederacy which existed prior to the withdrawal of these States from the Union. It is further the assertion of a right, on the part of Lord LYONS, by virtue of his credentials as Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, to exercise the power and authority of a Minister accredited to Richmond, and officially received as such by the President. Under these circumstances, and because of similar action by other Ministers, the President has felt it his duty to order that no direct communication be permitted between the Consuls of neutral nations in the Confederacy and the functionaries of those nations residing within the enemy's country. All communication, therefore, between Her Majesty's Consuls or Consular agents in the Confederacy and foreign countries, whether neutral or hostile, will hereafter be restricted to vessels arriving from or dispatched for neutral ports. The President has the less reluctance in imposing this restriction because of the ample facilities for correspondence which are now afforded by the fleets of Confederate and neutral steamships engaged in regular trade between neutral countries and the Confederate ports. This trade is daily increasing, in spite of the paper blockade, which is upheld by Her Majesty's Government in disregard, as the President conceives, of the rights of this Confederacy, of the dictates of public law, and of the duties of impartial neutrals.

You are instructed by the President to furnish a copy of this dispatch, with a copy of the papers appended, to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. BENJAMIN, Secretary of State.

Hon. JAMES M. MASON, Commissioner, &c., London.

THE FIGHT AT BEVERLY'S FORD.

The Lynchburgh Republican of the 11th, speaking of the late fight at Beverly's Ford, says:

"The forces engaged on our side were Gens. W. R. Lee, Hampton's Legion, JONES' and ROBERTSON'S brigades, with the Beauregard battery, from this city, and one other company of artillery. Our total force numbered about four thousand. The enemy had, it is estimated, about ten thousand cavalry, seven regiments of infantry, and six batteries—the whole under command of Gen. PLEASANTON.

The enemy commenced to cross the Rappahannock simultaneously at Beverly's and Kelly's Fords, and at other intermediate points, about daylight Tuesday morning, both of their main columns pushing forward toward Brandy Station, five miles below Culpepper Court-house, with the design of getting in rear of our forces, who were between the Court-house and station. They captured our pickets and thus prevented early intelligence of their movements being reported. The fight commenced at 7 o'clock, and about 10 o'clock our forces were all brought in position, and from that time until 2 o'clock the fight raged with terrific fierceness, our men gradually driving the enemy before them toward the Rappahannock bridge. About 2 o'clock the enemy commenced retreating up the Rappahannock, when Col. MUNFORD, commanding FITZ LEE'S brigade, whose camp was near Oak Shade, crossed the Hazel River and attacked them in their front. The fight continued to rage until 6 o'clock, when the discomfited enemy effected a recrossing of the Rappahannock at Beverly's and fords adjacent.

The enemy fought hand to hand for a time, but relied principally upon their cavalry, dismounted and used as infantry, and their artillery. Our brave troops made many desperate charges, and were often driven back by sheer force of numbers. They are often rallied, and finally succeeded in forcing the enemy to commence to retreat, leaving many of their dead and wounded in our hands.

Our losses are heavy, and among them some of our best officers. We took a large number of prisoners, three hundred and thirty-six of whom have already arrived, including two Majors. Thirty prisoners also arrived at Richmond from Winchester. These were captured by the forces under Gen. ALBERT G. JENKINS."

The Richmond Enquirer speaks of Capt. Farley, killed in the battle, as a scholar and a poet. Col. Hampton was killed at Stevensburgh, five miles from Culpepper.

The Dispatch says: "The number of officers slain is greatly out of proportion to the number of men, which is accounted for by their exposing themselves in efforts to rally their commands after the first onset of the enemy. Our whole loss, including prisoners, is put down at between 300 and 400. A passenger who came down on the train says that we have five Colonels killed. Among the wounded was Col. A. W. Harman, of the 12th Virginia cavalry, who was shot in the neck."

The Richmond Dispatch of the 13th gives some additional names of officers killed and wounded. It says:

"In addition to the names of the killed already given by us, we have the following:

Capt. Robert Jones, 1st S. C.; Sergt. John Stone, 6th Va.; privates Robert Simmons, 3d Va.; G. E. Wescott, 10th Va.; Upshur Manning, 12th Va.; A. R. Dowdin, Moorman's battery; J. Kent Longborne, Wise Troop; —— Preston, 2 Va. cavalry.

Col. Butler, 1st S. C., leg amputated; Capt. Farley, Stuart's Staff, leg amputated; Capt. White, Stuart's Staff; Lieut. N. Richardson, 10th Va.; Lieut. C. G. Shumate, 16th Va.; Lieut. R. W. Allen, 6th Va.; Lieut. John Puryear, 3d Va.; Maj. M. D. Ball, 11th Va., slightly; Capt. Andrews, 2d N. C.; Lieut. Blessingame, 2d N. C.; Sergt. J. M. Burret, 10th Va.; Sergt. John Mason, 10th Va., Corp. B. D. Brown, 10th Va.

Among the names of officers given as captured are Lieut.-Col. Wm. H. Payne, 4th Virginia, and Capt. Rich, of Young's regiment. We had no Colonels killed, except Cols. Williams and Hamilton. Col. Green, who was at first reported among the slain, was not injured.

Our loss in the engagement, it is believed by those who have favorable opportunities for knowing, will not fall far short of six hundred. This includes the entire loss—killed, wounded and missing. The loss of the enemy, it is said, exceeds our own.

The cars, on yesterday evening, brought down 302 prisoners of war, cavalrymen and artillerymen, captured by STUART'S cavalry in the fight near Brandy Station on Tuesday. Twelve of the number were commissioned officers—including one Colonel and one Major, and sundry Captains and Lieutenants.

The bodies of Col. HAMPTON, of Hampton's Cavalry brigade, and Col. WILLIAMS, of South Carolina, were received by the same train, and escorted by the Virginia State Guard to the Capitol. They are to be conveyed South for sepulture."

The Richmond Examiner has some severe strictures on the conduct of the Confederate military in relation to this fight. It says:

"The more the circumstances of the late affair at Brandy Station are considered, the less pleasant do they appear. If this was an isolated case, it might be excused under the convenient head of accident or chance. But this much-puffed cavalry of the Army of Northern Virginia has been twice, if not three times, surprised since the battles of December, and such repeated accidents can be regarded as nothing but the necessary consequences of negligence and bad management. If the war was a tournament, invented and supported for the pleasure and profit of a few vain and weak-headed officers, these disasters might be dismissed with compassion. But the country pays dearly for the blunders which encourage the enemy to overrun and devastate the land, with a cavalry which is daily learning to despise the mounted troops of the Confederacy. It is high time that this branch of the service should be reformed.

The surprise on this occasion was the most complete that has occurred. The Confederate cavalry was carelessly strewn over the country, with the Rappahannock only between it and an enemy who has already proven his enterprise to our cost. It is said that their camp was supposed to be secure, because the Rappahannock was not believed to be fordable at the point where it was actually forded. What—do Yankees, then, know more about the river than our own soldiers, who have done nothing but ride up and down its banks for the last six months? They knew, at least, the weather was dry, the water low, and that fifteen or twenty thousand horse, confident from impunity and success, were on the other side. They could not have failed to know this much, and they were surprised, caught at breakfast, made prisoners on foot, with guns empty and horses grazing. Although the loss was insignificant, the events of that morning were among the least creditable that have occurred. Later, some of the best officers sacrificed their lives to redeem the day. A very fierce fight ensued, in which it is said, for the first time in this war, a considerable number of sabre-wounds were given and received. In the end, the enemy retired, or was driven (it is not clearly known which) across the river. Nor is it certainly known whether the fortunate result was achieved by the cavalry alone or with the assistance of Confederate infantry in the neighborhood. As the Southern troops remained masters of the field, and as they are believed to have taken at least as many prisoners toward the close of the day as they lost in the morning, they may be considered victors.

But it is a victory over which few will exult. It resembles that other victory won at Kelly's Ford on the 17th of March. Both would have been well merited if valor had not paid the price of conceit and carelessness. The ease with which the enemy outwitted the guard of the river on the first occasion was the prompter of STONEMAN'S incursion at the head of ten thousand horse into the heart of the State, which he accomplished without the slightest interference from the Confederate cavalry. It is with pain that these reflections are made. They occur at this moment, not only to the present writer, but also to the whole public, and their utterance may have a wholesome effect. Events of this description have been lately too frequent to admit of the supposition that they are the results of hazard. They are the effects of causes, which will produce like effects while they are permitted to operate, and they require the earnest attention both of the chiefs of the Government and the heads of the army. The enemy is evidently determined to employ his cavalry extensively, and has spared no pains or cost to perfect that arm. The only effective means of preventing the mischief it may do is to reorganize our own forces, enforce a stricter discipline among the men, and insist on more earnestness among the officers in the discharge of their very important duty."

The Enquirer, of the 13th, says:

"We have at length a connected idea of the desperate affair which occurred in Culpepper on Tuesday last, and a satisfactory return of results. It seems that the enemy, after crossing the river near Brandy Station, cut off our pickets by surprise, and dashed into one of our advance camps before their approach could be guarded against. Our men fled, of course, being totally unprepared for the assault, but were rallied during the morning, and a general assault was made by STUART, which resulted in the defeat and retreat of the enemy. The latter engaged some ten thousand strong in the demonstration and attack. We lost some stores, camp equipage, and about 350 in killed, wounded and missing. The enemy's loss in killed and wounded is not correctly known, but must have reached between two and three hundred, while his loss in prisoners certainly numbered 380, including fourteen commissioned officers, all of whom have arrived in Richmond. Some twelve or fifteen of his wounded fell in our hands. The severest fighting was near Brandy Station, toward the close of the engagement, being a desperate hand-to-hand fight of cavalry. Although the day was finally won by our troops, the men feel sore that they should have been surprised in the beginning, and are anxious to retaliate in kind, at almost any hazard, in order that they may obliterate this unpleasant souvenir of unmilitary discipline. Accounts of the battle from various sources present an array of brilliant pictures, which may well adorn the history of the war. The spirit of our gallant soldiers, fighting though they were at a disadvantage, was brought out in its noblest light. Hand-to-hand they fought, with sabre and musket, and drove back the assailants on every part of the field. In one instance the enemy charged a battery, and our gunners met them with their rammers, unhorsed the first who dashed forward, and aided effectually in beating back the rest. With such incidents the fight was full."

MOVEMENTS OF CITY REGIMENTS.

Departure of the Thirty-seventh, Twenty-second, and Eleventh—Other Regiments to leave To-day.

The noble response of the New-York State Militia of this City to the call for troops to meet the pressing emergency in Maryland and Pennsylvania, was exemplified yesterday by the departure of no less than three regiments—the Thirty-seventh, Twenty-second, and Eleventh, making six regiments in two days, and the only reason why there were not eight, was because the requisite clothing and equipments were not to be had. The men were ready and eager to respond. And, it should be remembered these regiments marched with even fuller ranks than they have presented on the many parades in the City, of which the metropolis has been justly proud. No doubt, when they are all duly located, they will be joined by many members whose business would not admit of so sudden a departure, but whose hearts are still in the good cause. The Seventh regiment, especially, will be largely augmented in a few days by members of this class, who are never known to shirk the duties of active service, and who feel proud of the reputation which the corps d'élite has achieved for promptness and efficiency in times of need. All of the regiments have experienced equal difficulty in procuring the supplies, owing partly to the uncertainty as to the number who would go, and partly to the necessary red-tape with which all such proceedings are necessarily bound. Indeed, the red tape has become quite a by-word with the soldiers, and it is shrewdly suspected that if the City of New-York were to be menaced to-morrow, by a fleet of rebel privateers, threatening to enter the harbor, it would be impossible to get the requisite ammunition or missiles for the guns in the harbor forts without an official order, duly signed, countersigned, inspected, revised, scrutinized, examined, tested by oath and affirmation, and duly delivered to the proper officer, at a convenient hour of the day. It can hardly be expected that the authorities can have the equipments and supplies for half a dozen regiments ready, to be available at the tap of the drum. But it would seem that since such emergencies as the present have arisen previously, and are likely to arise again, it would be a fortunate circumstance if some official could be found to take the responsibility and have things done in a common sense sort of way. By this it is not intended to censure the State officials, for, despite the malicious predictions of the peace men that Gov. SEYMOUR would never permit another soldier to leave the State, the State Government has done its part of the work with energy and will. As it is, our regiments have not been as fully supplied as might be desired, but it is understood that whatever is lacking will be forthcoming at Harrisburgh or such other point as the Government may designate as headquarters.

Departure of the Thirty-seventh.

The armory of the Thirty-seventh, on Broadway near Houston-street, was crowded throughout the day and early evening with the members, recruits and their friends.

The Thirty-seventh received a considerable number of recruits, all good men, including some of the Hawkins Zouaves, and marched with between six and seven hundred. The armory was filled during the forenoon with the soldiers and their friends, so that it became necessary to station a guard at the entrance to prevent a crowd, which would obstruct business. Shortly after 8 o'clock the regiment formed in Broadway, and proceeded to the Battery, where, on the North River side, it embarked for New-Jersey and thence for Harrisburgh. The Thirty-seventh is a first-class organization, has seen service, is ably commanded, and will do honor to itself in the field.

The following are the names of its principal officers:

Colonel, CHARLES ROOME; Lieutenant-Colonel, Ossian D. Ashley; Major, Charles M. Catlin; Acting-Adjutant, Theodore W. Morris; Quartermaster, James A. Timpson; Surgeon, Henry G. Slack; Engineer, Walter Roome; Chaplain, G. J. Geer.

Company A, Capt. Charles C. Chapman; Co. B, Capt. A. M. Smith; Co. C, Capt. N. N. S. Catlin; Co. D, Capt. Wm. H. Parrar; Co. E, Capt. John Quackenbush; Co. F, Capt. George W. Lyon; Co. G, Capt. Albert Davidson; Co. H, Capt. George D. Waring; Co. I, Capt. J. T. Underhill; Co. K, Capt. W. O. Roome.

Departure of the Twenty-second.

The Twenty-second, under command of Lieut.-Col. ASPINWALL, was busy at the armory at Palace Garden all day, preparing to leave. It was expected that their supplies would be forthcoming, so that they could get off at 12 o'clock, but, as usual, there was delay—"some one had blundered"—and the men were kept hanging around until late in the afternoon. Fourteenth-street was the scene of much excitement, and when the regiment left, about 6 P. M., the popular ovation it received was cordial indeed.

The number of men marching with the Twenty-second was more than five hundred. The arms are Enfield rifles, with sword bayonets, which were used during the term of the regiment in the field last Summer. The following are the officers:

Colonel, LLOYD ASPINWALL; Lieutenant-Colonel, ——; Major, J. F. Fox; Adjutant, W. J. A. McGrath; Quartermaster, Jonathan Post; Chaplain, J. Cotton Smith.

Company A, Capt. James Otis; Co. B, Capt. D. S. Brown; Co. C, Capt. George R. Post; Co. D, Capt. J. F. Thorpell; Co. E, Capt. Allan F. Urlsey; Co. F, Capt. J. U. Francis; Co. G, Capt. H. E. Howland; Co. H, Capt. R. S. Grant; Co. I, Capt. A. B. Gardner; Co. K, Capt. —— Roberts.

Before leaving, the Twenty-second had a distinct understanding that they were to be absent not longer than thirty days; that they were not to be mustered into the United States service, and that, if they could be spared, they should return in less than thirty days.

Departure of the Eleventh Regiment.

The Eleventh regiment, Col. MAIDHOFF, secured their arms, uniforms and equipments on Wednesday evening, and orders were at once issued for their distribution yesterday, and the departure of the command at 4 o'clock. Their armory was densely crowded all morning, the bustling scenes of preparation filling every room. Issues were made of clothing, &c., by the regimental Quartermaster in the great hall, and in adjoining rooms company officers dealt out to the men the needed articles. Scores of friends were there bidding good-bye to the departing soldiers. Womanly kisses, gentle reproaches and lamentations mingled in the cloud of smoke and dust, with manly invitations to beer, giving, as in most Teutonic affairs, a half domestic and social character to the stern aspect of war.

By a little after noon the issues of clothing and equipments to the six hundred men of the regiment were completed, and a brief respite from labor was taken until 2 o'clock, the hour fixed for calling the rolls and "falling in" the several companies. At 5 o'clock the regiment formed on Fourth-street, right resting on Broadway, and marched down to Pier No. 2 North River, where they embarked for transportation to Harrisburgh, Penn.

Colonel, MAIDHOFF; Lieutenant-Colonel, Wm. B. Weinberger; Major, Henry Lux; Adjutant, L. L. Leidlaw; Quartermaster, H. Lisdehstroth; Surgeon, Dr. Eidenberg; Chaplain, Rev. M. J. H. Foesch.

Departure of the Brooklyn Twenty-third

The Twenty-third regiment departed for Pennsylvania yesterday morning. They formed in line on Orange-street, near Fulton-street, about 7 o'clock A. M., and marched down Fulton-street to the ferry at 8 o'clock. A large number of the friends and relatives of the members assembled at the armory to see them leave. On reaching New-York they marched up Fulton-street, and down Broadway to Pier No. 1 East River, where they took the boat for South Amboy, whence they will proceed to Philadelphia by railroad. The following is a list of the officers:

Colonel, WM. EVERDELL, Jr.; Lieutenant-Colonel, John A. Elwell; Major, (vacant;) Engineer, J. H. Frothingham; Surgeon, Dr. A. D. Wilson; Surgeon's Mate, Dr. Geo. H. K. Bennett; Quartermaster, Charles H. Stoddard; Adjutant, John M. Pratt.

Company B—Captain, E. Beers; First Lieutenant, E. W. Crowell; Second Lieutenant, Chas. E. Goldthwait.

Company C—Captain, S. W. Farnham; First Lieutenant, A. S. Fiske; Second Lieutenant, Henry White.

Company H—Captain, M. H. K. Styles; First Lieutenant, Chas. H. Joy; Second Lieutenant, A. H. Satterlee.

Company K—Captain, Charles E. Brown; First Lieutenant, James M. Pratt; Second Lieutenant, Charles F. Rogers.

Lieut. W. K. COMSTOCK is detailed to enlist new members and obtain transportation for those members who were unable to go with the regiment. All recruits are provided with uniforms.

The following complimentary order by Gen. SMITH, was issued before the departure of the regiment:

HEADQUARTERS ELEVENTH BRIGADE, N. G. S. N. Y., BROOKLYN, June 18, 1863.

SPECIAL ORDER No. 19.—The Brigadier-General of the Eleventh Brigade, N. G. S. N. Y., takes this occasion to congratulate the Twenty-third regiment N. G., of the State of New-York, for their success in getting off so promptly in response to the call of the Commander-in-Chief, to render assistance to the State of Pennsylvania and to the General Government in an emergency. In less than forty-eight hours from the time of the receipt of the order to prepare, you are on the march, and in condition to do effective duty.

JESSE C. SMITH, Brigadier-General, Commanding Eleventh Brigade N. G.

BENJ. HASKELL, Brigade Major.

The Fifty-sixth regiment were to have started for the seat of war last evening, but it was found impossible to equip the men in time, and the departure was delayed until this morning at 9 o'clock. The regiment will form on Fort Greene-place at the above hour, and at once proceed to the railroad depot in Jersey City. The following are the officers:

Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding, JOHN Q. ADAMS; Major, John A. Walsh; Engineer, Wm. C. Ludlam; Surgeon, Dr. Alexander Cochran; Surgeon's Mate, Dr. Barrow; Quartermaster, Philip H. Grogan; Adjutant, E. H. Cheshire.

Company A—Captain, T. P. Haynes; First Lieutenant, Thomas Webb; Second Lieutenant, Wm. Cheney.

Company B—Captain, J. W. Sweeney; First Lieutenant, G. W. Dick; Second Lieutenant, George W. Crans.

Company C—Captain, W. H Bulkley; First Lieutenant, J. F. Stevens; Second Lieutenant, Edwin Ludlam.

Company D—Captain, Peter Hanson; First Lieutenant, F. Van Pelt; Second Lieutenant, Theodore Mance.

Company E—Captain, Thomas A. O'Neil; First Lieutenant, G. W. Bradford; Second Lieutenant, J. F. James.

Company F—Captain, J. Brown; First Lieutenant, D. S. Brower; Second Lieutenant, vacant.

Company G—Captain, H. V. Dwenger; First Lieutenant, W. H. Wright; Second Lieutenant, vacant.

Company H—Captain, A. V. S. Burt; First Lieutenant, W. Firth; Second Lieutenant, Thos. H. Lawler.

Company I—Captain, E. C. Palmer; First Lieutenant, J. D Bates; Second Lieutenant, G. W. Dorrence.

Company K—Captain, Wm. V. Babcock; First Lieutenant, Roddy; Second Lieutenant, Ward.

The Thirteenth, Twenty-eighth and Forty-seventh regiments have not yet received marching orders, but will probably leave to-morrow. The Thirteenth may go to-day. All is ready, and the only difficulty appears to be transportation.

Capt. BUSH, of Company H, and Lieut. CRANS, of Company B, of the Fifty-sixth regiment, were presented with swords on Wednesday night, by the members of their respective companies.

Mayor KALBFLEISCH yesterday issued the following proclamation, calling upon all citizens who can be spared from their homes to fill up the ranks of the regiments now leaving for Pennsylvania:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, BROOKLYN, June 18, 1863.

Whereas, some of our States have been invaded by an armed force, in open hostility to our Government, it therefore becomes the DUTY of our citizens, loyal to the United States, to expel the invaders from the territory of any State so invaded, and especially from those firmly adhering to the Union. Therefore, I, MARTIN KALBFLEISCH, Mayor of the City of Brooklyn, earnestly request any and all citizens who can be spared from their homes and business avocations, to forthwith join such regiments as are now ordered to the seat of war, in order to fill up their ranks, and march in defence of their country, and to expel the traitorous horde from the sacred soil of the loyal States.

MARTIN KALBFLEISCH, Mayor.

THE BROOKLYN THIRTEENTH.

HEADQUARTERS THIRTEENTH REGIMENT, N.Y.S. N.G., BROOKLYN, June 18, 1863.

GENERAL ORDERS.—1. Pursuant to orders from the Commander-in-Chief, this regiment is hereby ordered to assemble, fully equipped in the regimental fatigue uniform, at the City Armory, on Saturday, 20th inst., at 8 o'clock A. M., prepared to march forthwith, en route to Harrisburgh, Penn.

2. These orders, coming from the President of the United States, through the Governor of this State, are imperative, and every man connected with the regiment will be required to report in person or by substitute. Those neglecting or refusing to comply, will be dealt with as the law directs.

3. Volunteers will be received to fill up the various companies.

4. The term of service required of the regiment is not to exceed ninety days; in all probability, will not exceed thirty days.

5. Each man will provide himself with two days' cooked rations.

6. All necessary equipments, etc., will be delivered to the Commandants of companies, upon their requisitions, at the armory, to-morrow evening, (Friday, June 19.)

By order, Col. JOHN B. WOODWARD.

WM. AUGUSTUS MCKEE, Adjutant.

The Fifth Regiment to Leave To-Day.

The Fifth regiment (also German,) is under marching orders, and will form at one o'clock this afternoon, in order to take its departure for Pennsylvania. The number of men is seven hundred and fifty to eight hundred, of a total of nine hundred on the rolls. No recruits were taken, and the deficiency represents approximately the number of men who could not go with the regiment. The proportion is, however, very small. The equipments were furnished yesterday afternoon, and will be distributed this morning.

The Fifth is one of our best organizations, and has already done good service.

The following are the names of the officers:

Colonel, Louis Burger; Lieutenant-Colonel, J. P. B. Dodge; Major, A. Meyer; Adjutant, William Dickel; Quartermaster, E. Wilson; Assistant Quartermaster, Holsworth; Surgeon, Dr. Hasse; Sergeant-Major, Zoebisch.

Company A, Capt. Hangles; B, Capt Maurer; C, Capt. Kreeger; D, Capt. Meyer; E, Capt. Hildebrandt; F, Capt. Bruer; G, Capt. Reiss; H, Capt. Kattenhorn; I, Capt. Aberle; K, Capt. Schelder.

The Sixty-ninth Getting Ready.

The Armory of the Sixty-ninth regiment, yesterday morning, evidenced all the energy and bustle incident to the early departure of this fine corps. The officers and men are fully alive to the exigencies of the occasion, and on Wednesday quite a protracted session of the former was held at their headquarters, Essex Market Drill Rooms, for the purpose of perfecting such arrangements as will enable them to comply with the orders of the State authorities with as little delay as possible.

Col. BAGLEY, who commanded the regiment in its previous campaign in Virginia, will head the corps during this now projected one, while Maj. CAVANAGH, of the 69th, (MEAGHER'S Irish brigade,) who was incapacitated from service by reason of wounds received at Fredericksburgh, has recovered sufficiently to accept the position of Lieutenant-Colonel, tendered him by the commanding officer. The post of Major is still vacant.

The Fifty-fifth Organizing.

The Fifty-fifth is organizing as a separate battalion, and expects to get ready some day next week. The headquarters are at the Lafayette Hall.

The Fourth Artillery to March To-day.

Gen. SANDFORD has received intelligence from Harrisburgh that the Fourth Artillery regiment can be supplied with guns, and that organization is expected to take its departure to-day with five hundred men in the ranks.

The following orders have been issued in regard to the departure of this regiment:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, N. G. S. N. Y., NEW-YORK, June 18, 1863.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 24.—Col. D. W. TELLER will proceed with his regiment, the Fourth Artillery, National Guard, to Harrisburgh, as part of Gen. YATES' brigade. He will report on his arrival to Maj.-Gen. COUCH, commanding the Department, who will furnish him with guns, horses, caissons and camp equipage.

He will report to the Major-General his numbers, and when he will be ready to embark, and will receive a requisition for transportation. Each man will take two days' cooked provisions. By order of

Maj.-Gen. CHARLES W. SANDFORD.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, A. D. C.

The Twelfth Regiment Preparing.

The Twelfth regiment, Col. WARD, is preparing to march. The companies to-day assembled at the armory, Nos. 694 and 696 Broadway; the uniforms for the soldiers were provided; recruiting is in progress, and it is estimated that the ranks, when the regiment starts, will include four hundred men. One of the companies takes its members into the field, without an exception. The subject was made one of pride and reputation, and there are to be no substitutes nor absentees. The record of the Twelfth is inseparable from the history of the war for the Union, and replete with honor.

The Tenth Regiment, Col. Bendix.

This regiment is organizing as the Tenth regiment New-York State National Guard, and is intended to be perpetuated as a militia regiment, with the same numerical designation under which it was honored in the army of the United States. At the meeting, last evening, the free use of the rooms corner of Mercer and Broome streets were given by the proprietor, Mr. JAMES HADDON. The muster-rolls were distributed, and one company, in half an hour, had forty men. It is proposed to offer their services to the Government for three months, and it is expected that at least six hundred, mainly from Col. BENDIX'S old command, will enlist.

Gen. Ewen has a Command.

The following General Order was issued by Major-Gen. SANDFORD this forenoon:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, N. Y. N. G., NEW-YORK, June 18, 1863.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 23.—Brig.-Gen. EWEN having returned to the City and reported for duty, will assume command of his brigade, and prepare to start with it to Harrisburgh.

Special Order No. 22 is countermanded, and Cols. MAIDHOFF and ASPINWALL and Major BAGLEY will report with their regiments to Brig.-Gen. EWEN.

By order of Major-Gen. CHAS. W. SANDFORD.

ALEX. HAMILTON, A.D. C.

He will report, on his arrival, to Maj.-Gen. COUCH, commanding the Department, who will furnish him with guns, horses, caissons and camp equipage.

He will report to the Major-General his numbers, and when he will be ready to embark, and will receive a requisition for transportation.

Each man will take two days' cooked provisions. By order of Major-Gen. CHARLES W. SANDFORD.

Brig.-Gen. CHARLES YATES.

CHAS. TRUMBULL WHITE, Brigade Major and Inspector.
